Within the great echoing hall Lilias Lejenne lay, her hands interlocked under her head, the gorgeous, striped Afghans making a proper setting to her girlish beauty, while Litias Lejeune, the elder, her forty-year old maiden aunt, sat at the other end of the place, arranging ong-stemmed roses in a quaint Omari vase, with dragon handles, and throat splashed with the delicious blue tint so dear to connoisseurs.

She had once been very pretty; she had an interesting countenance still. "It's very condescending of Miss Lejeune to come to visit the poor overseer's taughter," she siad ironically. But Lilias ignored the tone.

A Sectional Party.

From the Inter Coren. The Democratic leaders in the North 's we labourd for many years to show that they belonged to a National and not a sectional party. They convinced many voters of this fact fast fall, but the first Congress to assemble after that great Democratic victory gives a flat denial to these assertions. The disinguished Georgia Democrat elected Speaker of this Fifty-third Congress in his list of committees expresses his confidence in the Democracy of the South. He gives to Southern Democrats thirty of the chairmanships and but twenty-two to Northern Democrats Of the four most important committees he gives the absolute control into the hands of oothern men, both as to chairmen and maorities. There are thirty-seven committees that have Southern majorities in the Democratic membership and only fourteen that have Northern Democrats in control.

This may not be sectionalism as to the organization of the committees as a whole, but
