THE WEATHER OF THE WORLD. A crimson-kilted maiden, With braided tresses fair, Stood in her little doorway Whenever it fell. Whenever it raly A pretty lad in blue Came to his little window As to note the view. Whenever it raly She hastes with curious care To hide herself—no, no, no, Whenever it falls She looks upon the sunlight With mischievous eyes And thinks: "If there were some one About my side and also Who'd share my little life Entirely sympathetic!"

NANCY'S WAGES. How Uncle Peter Came to Know Her True Worth. "Twelve o'clock and the washing ain't out yet!" said Nancy Norton, with a frightened glance at the clock. "But I've had such a spell of 'not-backs' I'll have to wait a while till the hired man have had their dinner."

All Sorts of Cranks. "Well, I know lots of men who never fail to pick up a pin, the same as you do. Then there are the sidewalk cranks, who always step on each third or fourth crack, according to the width of the board, or, if they are walking on a pavement, they step between and on the cracks."

The New Year. Among the Latin Christian countries there were seven different dates of beginning the new year. March 1, January 1, December 25, March 25, and two ways—first by beginning the year more or less sooner than at present, second by beginning it three months later—at Easter and on the feast of ascension. The usage of the same country has varied at different times. In France under the Merovingians the year began on March 1. The Carolingians began their year on December 25, and the Gregorians at Easter. The Romans, till Caesar's time began the year on March 1, and an illustration of the reluctance to change names is seen in the fact, although the names September, October, November and December originally denoted the number of the months, they are now grossly inapplicable. The Egyptians, Chaldeans, Persians, Syrians, Phoenicians and Carthaginians began their year in the autumn, as did the Jews their civil year.

Don't Omit Them. A practice is growing, indeed it has become quite common in some parts of the country, of omitting the prominent subjects of sentences. We give here the exact text of a letter received by the editors a few weeks ago, the place where the adventure occurred only having been changed: "Have a story of adventure of about 3,500 words. It is an account of a young engineer's adventures in the mountains of Colorado; it is long, and I believe might suit your paper."

Score One for the Organ Grinder. An Italian organ-grinder recently escaped by his wile. He had been playing before the house of an insoluble old gentleman, who furiously and amidst wild gesticulations ordered him to move on. The Italian stolidly stood his ground and played on, and at last was arrested for causing a disturbance. At the Court the Magistrate asked him why he did not leave when he was requested. "He no understand" mooch Ingles," was the reply. "Well, but you must have understood by his motions that he wanted you to go," said the Magistrate. "I tiah he come to dance," was the rejoinder.—Rocky.

Effusive Hospitality. "Yes," said Mrs. Stuffyknees, "myself and me little band of players were received with extraordinary hospitality during our recent tour." "Indeed?" "Yes, I shall never forget one occasion when various persons in the audience actually went so far as to bring food from their own homes, and present it to us over the footlights. It was done, with an enthusiasm which so embarrassed us that we left the stage."—Washington Star.

NO BETTER IN THE COUNTRY. The Good Work of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in 1893. The B. & O. R. R., the pioneer of the American Railway System, has of recent years been renewing its youth, so to speak, and attracting to its lines a constantly increasing share of the passenger traffic country-wide. It will be noted that the last fiscal year ended June 30th, and the best business of the World's Fair is not included in the figures, but will go to swell the gross receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1894. No road in America has had greater experience than the B. & O. in handling large volumes of passenger business, and none is able to do it better. Every four years it is called upon to transport the enthusiastic thousands from the East, North and West to and from the presidential inaugurations, and it broke all previous records by its work during the Grand Army encampment at Washington, in 1892. Thus prepared by its past experience the B. & O. is in position to take good care of the multitudes traveling to Chicago during the World's Fair, and while it probably carried to and from Chicago a greater number of people than any other road of equal mileage, it is gratifying to be able to state that not a single World's Fair traveler was killed on the B. & O. system.—Baltimore American, December 31, 1893.

A Few Eye "Don'ts". Don't allow a cold wind to strike the eyes. Don't try to do eye work with the light shining in the face. Don't have colored shades on the lamps; use white or ground glass. Don't go directly from a warm room into a cold, raw atmosphere. Don't open the eyes under water in bathing, especially in salt water. Don't let any strong light, like that from electricity, shine directly into the eyes. Don't strain the eyes by reading, sewing or any like occupation, with an imperfect light. Don't bathe inflamed eyes with cold water; that which is warm as it can be borne is better. Don't sleep opposite a window; in such manner that a strong light will strike the eyes on awakening. Don't, above all, have the children sleep so that the morning sun shall shine in their faces to arouse them. Don't expect to get another pair of eyes when these have been destroyed by neglect or illness; but give them fair treatment and they will serve faithfully to the end.—Good Housekeeping.

The Football Player's Sorrow. "These boys are our fondest dreams dispelled," said the dejected-looking young man, as he dropped his head with its long, flowing locks into his hands. "And she always seemed so unselfish." "Oh, well, brace up. Think of your fame as a football player." "It is that which sundered the ties that bound us. She demanded too much." "But you told me only a short time ago that you would give her your life if she asked for it." "So I would—but what she desired was—"

Eggs. Eggs may lose their nourishment by cooking. The yolk, raw or very slightly boiled, is exceedingly nutritious. It is, however, the only food for those afflicted with jaundice. When an egg has been exposed to long continuance of ordinary heat, its nature is entirely changed. A slightly boiled egg, however, is more easy of digestion than a raw one. The best accompaniment for a hard egg is vinegar. Raw eggs have a laxative effect; hard boiled, the contrary. There is an idiosyncrasy in some persons, which shows itself in the utter disgust which they experience, not only against the egg itself, but also against any preparation of which it forms an ingredient, however slight. Eggs should always be liberally accompanied by bread.—Table Topics.

Curiosity of The Law. Additions to rented premises, when made by the tenant, should never be fastened with nails, but with screws. The reason for this lies in the fact that should the landlord wish to remove the tenant's improvements he can simply draw out the screws and take the planks. If he fastens them with nails, however, he can remove nothing, and the improvements become the landlord's property. The fact results from a legal quibble, insisting that articles fastened with screws are for temporary use, and if put in place by the tenant are his own property.—St. Louis lawyer in the Globe Democrat.

Social Darnings. The weekly darning, which not even "progressive" women shrink, is delightfully got through in a certain town in the province. The darning done at one house, with ball and egg and supply of stockings, one of the number reading aloud while the rest ply the needle. The reader is selected a week ahead, and must do her darning at home and alone that once in the season.—New York Times.

Neil's Observation. Little Neil, dining with the grown-up members of the family, gazed contemplatively at each one in turn, then remarks slowly: "All the ladies here bangs over their noses, and all the gentlemen has they bangs under their noses."—Larger's Bazaar.

An old woman of undeniable Celtic origin entered a drowsy slumber back the other day, and walked up to the desk. "Do you want to draw or deposit?" asked the questioning clerk. "Now, I don't. O. transfer put some in," was the reply. The clerk picked up the book for her signature and, indicating the place, said, "Sign on this line, please." "Above it or below it?" "Just above it." "My whole name?" "Yes." "Before or is now?" "No, just as now." "O. can't write."—Boston Transcript. "Indeed?" BOOKWORMS CARES. In the first place, be sure you select perfectly pure book cloth, free from grit; it is free from adulterations with rye, but one quart of cold water to a small-necked stone or earthen jar; add to it one tablespoonful of salt, and three and three-quarter cups of lukewarm water, which will be little less than a quart. Let it well mix perfectly smooth; then add half a compressed yeast cake, dissolved in half a cup of lukewarm water. Mix well. Place a saucer or plate over the top of the jar and let stand in a moderately warm place—about 60 degrees Fahr.—until mummy. In the morning dissolve half a teaspoonful of warm water in two tea-spoonsful of warm water. Stir this into the latter; be cautious, though, and they are ready to take. The soda is added, not to make the cakes light, but to correct a peculiar bitterness that is frequently found in bookworm. If in the morning you should find the bookworm mixture a little too thick, add water to it to make it the desired thickness.—Household Notes. EFFUSIVE HOSPITALITY. "Yes," said Mrs. Stuffyknees, "myself and me little band of players were received with extraordinary hospitality during our recent tour." "Indeed?" It cures croup, has fever and cold in the head. It is easily applied into the nostrils and gives instant relief. Price 50 cents. My catarrh was very bad. For thirty years a number of remedies without relief. A druggist advised Ely's Cream Balm. I have used only one bottle and I can say I feel like a new man. I make his voluntary statement that others may know of the Balm.—J. W. Mathewson, (Lawyer), Fairmount, R. I.
