Burt Pleads Guilty. Doylestown, on Tuesday, pleaded guilty to wife, last September.

The crime to which Burt pleaded guilty ber 24, 1893, and, from its unusual atrocity, attracted much attention, Samuel M. Rightley and his wife Leng, sized respectively 84 and 80 years, were murdered in their beds between 4 and 7 o'clock on that morning. A box containing about $11 or $15 was taken from beneath the old couple's pillow, and a lighted lamp was then thrown into the bed between the couple, setting fire to the bed-clothing. When Mrs. Stetler, a relative and neighbor, who had been waiting upon the old couple, went to the house that morn ing at 7 o'clock, the flames had gained considerable headway, but were finally quench-

At the first trial, last January, it was admitted that if Burt was guilty at all he was guilty of first degree murder. At that trial count of the sickness of one of the jurors.
