SWEETHEARTS ALWAYS. BY DANIEL O'CONNELL

If sweethearts were sweethearts always, Whether as maid or wife, No drop would be hulf as pleasant In the mingled draught of life.

But the sweetheart has smiles and blushes When the wife has frowns and sighs And the wife's have a wrathful glitter For the glow of the sweetheart's eyes.

Who would change-for a future of Eden The Joys of this checkered life? But husbands grow grave and silent, And cares on the anxious brow

Happy is he whose sweetheart Is wife and sweetheart still-Whose voice, as of old, can charm Whose kiss, as of old, can thrill Who has plucked the rose to find ever

Who sees in the step a lightness, Who reads an unaltered brightness In the witchery of the face.

Undimmed and unchanged. Ah! happy Is he crowned with such life

TERROR OF

QUANTRELL AND HIS GUERRILLAS.

How a Mild Mannered, Peaceful Ohio Youth Grew to Be the Most Cruel and Bloodthirsty Figure of the Rebellion-His Mother Still Living.

The slow-going, old fashioned Village of Canal Dover, in Ohio, pleasantly situated in the broad, fertile valley of the Tuscarawas, was the birthplace of William Clark Quantrell, one of the strangest and most sinister figures of the late war, and here his aged, white-haired mother, after a peaceful and blameless life that throws in a stronger light the bloody and violent career of Ler wayward son, awaits the final summons. The nantrell was born is still standing at the corner of two of the side streets of the village, says the Kansas City Sar correspondent, and there are many of the villagers who recall the guerrilla leader as a smooth-faced, flaxen-haired, lighthearted boy upon whom the baleful shadow of future events had not yet fallen. In visits to Missouri and Kansas I baye met and talked with many of the companions of Quantrell and with others who were eve-witnesses of his deeds. To secure the prologue to his career I journeyed to this place and for several hours this afternoon sat and talked with the mother of this extraordinary man about whom so much has been said and written and of whom so little that is really true is known.

having been born in Somerset county. Pennsylvania, in April, 1819, but carries well her weight of years. She is below the medium height, her blue eyes are undimmed by age, and her round, pleasant face must have once been very handsome. There is a strong resemblance between the features of the mother and those of the son, as seen in the portrait in oil that hangs on the wall on her humble home. "I can only tell you," she said, "of my son's life before the war. God and his men alone know his later deeds and the motives that prompt them. No one else does. As to Advertising.

Here is the way an observing advertising genius figures out a plain truth : It is a safe rule to take advertising as you would medicine-when you need it. Advertising is the only medicine for sick business, but it must be of good quality, just as medicine must be good to do good. It is poor policy to publish a misleading ad. The plainer and more truthful it is the better. Business men are coming to understand this more and more every day. The time has passed when "people like to be humburge t. Barrum is dead.
