THE DISCARED BABY.

CLARA AUGUSTA.

Mr. James Weed was forty-six and unmarried. Moreover he intended to remain so. He had a horror of women, and a double horror of babies. The very sight of one of the little darlings gave him the ague, with symptoms of a pain in his stomach.

One memorable day, Mr. Weed started for New York, on the 630 train. He was a country merchant, and made a semi-annual journey to the metropo-Its to purchase goods. He was in fine spirits and a new suit of clothes.

The first stopping place after leaving Winford, Mr. Weed's residence, was Axtell, and at Axtell quite a large number of persons entered the ears. Among them a pretty young woman picious bandle of white flanuel in her you, baby and all?" arms that the initiated at once surmis-
