GENERAL REJOICING THROUGHOUT THE TOWN.

Monday work on the water works had progressed far enough to permit testing the mains and the bed of the reservoir, and was accordingly generated in the boilers and the pumps started.

It might be well at this time to explain that the borough had two wells drilled in the basin of West Union street, from which it is proposed to secure sufficient water to supply the demands of 90 towns.

The flooding of the mains was greeted with satisfaction by all of the residents of the town, many of whom had entertained doubts as to the ability of the wells to supply the demand that would be made upon them.

During the afternoon hose was attached to the fire-plugs in various parts of the town, when, with a pressure of 90 pounds, a steady stream of water was easily thrown onto the highest buildings.
