Whatever and all that is spilled, MISS THANKFUL

BY ANN DEMING GRAY.

It seemed to be one of the ironies of fate that her name should have been ed Instinctively at the name when they first met her, for to them there was so little in her narrow life to be thankful to those of the limited number who so tall, but he was just as timid, and I grew to know Miss Thankful the name was, after all, quite appropriate.

She was a faded looking little woman of 45, whose plain face was only redeemed by a pair of smiling brown eyes. She was a day seamstress and made enough to pay her board and usually to keep herself suitably clothed.

It was a standing joke among the other boarders that no matter how disagreeable the day Miss Thankful could always find something pleasant to be said about it. And, no matter how unprepossessing the last new boarder, Miss Thankful's kind heart was sure to

She had watched Florence, Mrs. Simmon's young daughter, grow up into womanhood and had shared her timid confidences and opinions about the different young men of the house, confidences which Florence would never have thought of telling her practical mother. There was something about Miss Thankful which invited confidence, and the two were warm friends. It was a dull February evening, a slight snow was falling, and Miss Thankful hurried along toward home in the early dusk. The windows were lighted up and presented a tempting and confectionery. But Miss Thankful did not notice any of them until she turned into Bond street, and there she walked slowly, window, "Yes," she said softly, "it's sold. So cheap too. Only $1.50." She was gazing at a blue satin party bag, lined with delicate pink, one of those dainty French affairs which always catch a woman's eve if she has any soul for pleasing effects. "I can't afford a new dress this year.

That three weeks I was sick last month put that out of the question, and so it does seem as if I could buy that bag if I want to. Only it would be sillydownright silly!" and she sighed. I never had anything as pretty as

"Oh, yes, that pretty bag. Pretty thing. Cheap too, I know a good piece of satin when I see it. Funny it was not sold to-day. Will be to-morrow likely."

Miss Thankful felt her desire to posess the bag increasing. "On your way home? Let me take your umbrella," and they walked on

Miss Thankful had a decided liking for this one of the boarders, partly because he never forgot to show her the same courtesy that he would show to

she said, with the serene thoughtlessness of youth. Miss Thankful grew silent. "Mr. Jones has asked me to go to vening service twice lately," she went on presently. "I think he is about the best looking young man here, don't you, Miss Thankful? He never talks much, but I suppose he thinks a great deal. I used to think he disliked me, he stammered so whenever I spoke to him, but I guess it was just because he didn't feel acquainted." And then followed a recital of Mr. Jones' sayings.

After she had gone Miss Thankful sat for a long, long time in front of the Miss Thankful Hope. Strangers smil- grate, with sad dreamy eyes fixed on the fire. She was going over in her mind a time 25 years before.

"He was nothing like Mr. Jones," she said. "He was good looking and acted as careless and indifferent as I knew how! Girls are foolish creatures. He never got up the courage to tell me. And then we moved away, and that was all. No other man ever looked at me, and I can't say as I want them to,

She undressed slowly. She felt old. This looking back at one's youth has a tendency to make one feel old if it lies 25 years behind one.

When she was all ready for bed, she pened the trunk and took out the par-

She opened the door and listened. Everything was still in the dim hall. Florence's room was only a few doors away, Miss Thankful slipped noiselessly along, and when she reached the door she hung the ribbon over the knob and as softly stole back.

She had put no card in the bag there was no need. Florence would knew who sent it, and then she went

The next morning Florence knocked at the door almost before Miss Thankful was dressed and came in with a flushed, happy face.

"Oh, Miss Thankful," she cried, "I have had the loveliest gift! What do array of millinery, dry goods, flowers you think-that blue satin party bag! "Of course Mr. Jones sent it. I asked him last night if it was sold yet, and he grew just as red and stammered so. I know why now. Mother coming to a standstill at last in front of Cooper's large dry goods house.

As a rule, the English does not shine postprandially In comparison with the average American of the same grade in law, politics, literature, the drama or journalism, Most of them, in fact, are dire failures. Coleridge and Irving are the shining no place to live on like the farm, in Martin Farquhar Tupper was insufferastead of believing it to be the place bly dull. Toole, the commedian, who from which he will escape as soon as was considered fanny on the other side, was lugubrious here. It took several seasons to break in Wilson Barrett.

Lord Aberdeen is genial, but prosy. Dickens was the best man who preeration of diners he is only a tradition few had the pleasure of hearing him. I had that pleasure here as well as in England, and he certainly has a remarkable facility of expression combined with a fine vocabulary, a keen ense of humor and a thorough knowledge of human nature. Coleridge, however, I repeat, took the palm and has worn it in the memory of friends whom he met here to this day.-Chicago In-
