SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 25,-The best known physician of Morrisonville, Dr. Richard Reasoner, was deliberately waylaid and murdered last night by Alfred Entrekin, for the very remarkable reason that Entrekin believed the doctor had inseated Mrs. Entrekin's reason by the administration of the wrong remedies

Morrisonville is a village southeast of this city, one of those hamlets where everybody knows and talks about every other person's affairs. Mrs. Entrekin, lady well-known to all the villagers, was recently taken very ill with a fever. Dr. Reasoner, the nearest, and generally reputed to be the best, physician in that community, was summoned. After Mrs. Entrekin had passed through a severe siege of fever and finally recovered under the doctor's treatment, she showed such unmistakable evidences of insanity A band of bad Bannocks, led by a dis- as sometimes develop in fever patients, especially adults afflicted with severe cases of scarlet fever.

TONGUES BEGAN TO WAG.

The neighbors began to gossip about the case, and various methods of treatment, radically different from those pursned by Dr. Reasoner in attending Mrs. Entrekin, were suggested by one and another of the villagers. Finally Entrekin himself became greatly wrought up over the case. He diligently inquired concerning just what prescriptions had been made out for his wife. By comparison of notes with the neighbors he reached the conclusion that the wrong drugs had been administered, and that Mrs. under other treatment.
