LODGING FOR WORK. Josiah Flynt and a Companion Wind Up

a Study of Tramp Life In England by a Visit to a "Spike"-Meeting With a Great Friend of Mark Twain. Josiah Flynt, who has given interesting studies on tramp life in Germany and in this country, has extended his investigations to England. He writes a paper entitled, "Two Tramps In England" in Century. We and his companion, a German student, completed a tour through the provinces with an experience in a "casual" at Notting Hill, London. Mr. Flynt writes:

We appeared at the door of the ward about half past 7 in the evening. A little window was raised, and I stepped forward to state my business. Unconsciously I leaned against the sill of the window, which offended the inspector in charge considerably.

"What's your name?" he thundered. Still leaning on the sill, I gave him my name honestly enough. He then remarked to some person inside that we were not accustomed to such places evidently, and called out, "Stand back, will you!" Back I stood. He cried out again, 'Take off your hat!" My hat came off instanter. Still again: "You come in here as if you was a meeleconary. You're not. You're a casual." I was as meek as could well be. Ryborg was itching to grab the inspector with his long arms. The next question was as to where we had slept the night before. "Straw stack," I replied.

"None of your impudence! You slept out. Why don't you say so? Have you got any money?" "A hap'enny, sir."

"Hand it in." In it went. Then I pany. had to fell my trade, which was that of was as to where I was bound. "To Ameriky, sir, if I can ever get him anything he wanted. When he was through with us, a kind hearted attendant took us in hand, gave us some gruel and bread, a bath, clean night shirts, and then a cell apiece, in which we slept very well. As there were only four inmates that morning we were needed for the cleaning up, and so escaped stone brenking. which I dreaded exceedingly, and were put at various light occupations-or rather I was. Ryborg was the victim of his strength. Our breakfast consisted of the same dish as our supper of the night before. I was soon busy as general fireman, scrubber, knife cleaner, coal carrier, dish washer and helper of my sister sufferer, Mrs. Murphy, as she washed her task of towels and shirts. At noon we had pen soop and bread. I en-Soved it, but Ryborg did not. The poor fellow was feeling badly. He had had to serub nearly 20 cells, and the bending over incident to such a feat had nearly broken his back. At dinner he said plaintively, "Flynt, I want to go "ionse." "So do I," I replied, "but I funcy we're wanted here till tomorrow morning." This proved to be the case. but he felt better in the afternoon and got through comfortably, wheeling nearly a ton of stone from some of the cells to the general pile. He earned his

"keep," if ever any poor prisoner did. I fear I was more shiftless, for about the middle of the afternoon the attendant who was with me at the furnace said: "You might as well rest. Just keep your eye on the fires, that's all." It was kind of him, and as I had at least carned my pea soup and gruel I took his advice. He was kinder to me, I think, because I gave him a corncob pipe which he had had to take away from me the night before. During the day be had asked me several questions about it, and I said, "It's a very decent sort of pipe--coolinlike, you know."

"Doesn't Mark Twain always smoke one o' them pipes?" said he "Blest if I know," said I, "but I can well think it."

"I'm a great friend of Mark Twain,"

he pursued, "an I'm a-thinkin o' gettin one o' them pipes, jest out of respect for "Well," said I, "permit me in the name of your respect to present you with my pipe. Besides you've got it anyhow." He thanked me profusely, and London Tit-Bits. promised to keep it forever. Later in the day he reported it to be just as I had said, "sort o' coolin like." And he was a good friend to me all the rest of my stay in the Notting Hill station. On Wednesday morning we were turned loose with our two ha pennies. We were both so happy that we decided to get off the road that very day. We had been tramps for three weeks, and had walked most of this time fully 15 miles a day. So we looked up my friend at the Temple, and in a few hours were respectable again. That same day I took my tramp clothes out to the casual ward and presented them to my friend the attendant. I had told him the day before that I expected to get new "togs" coon, and he had put in a plea for my old ones. Good luck to him and them.

> By means of a recent French improvement the process of galvanic bronzing is said to have been made not only more simple, but capable also of giving every tone, from that of barbedian bronze to antique green, governed by the length of time that the copper is allowed to remain in contact with the liquid. After the piece has been well scoured it is covered by means of a brush with a mixture composed of 20 parts of easter oil, 80 of alcohol and 40 parts each of soft soap and water. Thus treated, the nices left to itself for a period of 24 hours becomes bronzed, and if the duration of contact be prolonged the tone changes, a very great variety of tones, pleasing in their appearance, being obtainable in this manner. The drying is finally effected with hot sawdust, the only remaining operation being then that of coating the piece with a colorless varnish largely diluted with alcohol, thus insuring work of the finest character. -- New York Sun.
