

Published every Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock in advance, otherwise it will be discontinued until payment is received. Postmaster: This paper will be held responsible for its contents. Address: THE SOMERSET HERALD, SOMERSET, PA.

The Somerset Herald.

ESTABLISHED 1827. VOL. XLIV. NO. 15. SOMERSET, PA., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1895. WHOLE NO. 2304.

First National Bank
Somerset, Penn'a.
Capital, $50,000.
Surplus, $20,000.
DEPOSITS RECEIVED IN LARGE AND SMALL AMOUNTS, PAYABLE ON DEMAND.
STOCKS OF MERCHANTS, FARMERS, AND OTHERS SOLICITED.
DISCOUNTS DAILY.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS:
LARRY M. HICKS, GEO. B. SCULL,
JAMES L. PUGH, W. H. MILLER,
JOHN R. SCOTT, ROBERT S. SCULL,
FRED W. BIESSECKER.

The Somerset County National Bank
OF SOMERSET PA.
Established, 1877. Organized as a National, 1890.
Capital, $50,000.
Surplus and Undivided Profits $16,000.
Chas. J. Harrison, Pres't.
Wm. H. Koontz, Vice Pres't.
Milton J. Pritts, Cashier.
DIRECTORS:
SAMUEL SNYDER, WM. ENDSLEY,
JOSHUA SPECHT, JONAS M. COOK,
JOHN H. SNYDER, JOHN STUFF,
JOSEPH B. HAYES, SAM'L M. MILLER,
HARRISON SNYDER, JEROME STUFF,
SAM. B. HARRISON.

Wild & Anderson,
Iron & Brass Founders,
Engineers and Machinists and Engine Builders.
Manufacturers of—
COAL CAR WHEELS and AXLES.
New and second-hand Machinery, Shafting, Hangers and Pulleys, Injectors, Lubricators, Oil Cans, Etc.
Shop on Broad St., near B.C.O. Depot.
Johnstown, Pa.

THE ART AMATEUR.
Best and Largest Practical Art Magazine.
The only Art Periodical awarded a Medal at the World's Fair.
Available to all who wish to make their living by art or to make their leisure hours profitable.
For 10c, we will send you a complete copy of this magazine, a special issue on "Painting for Beginners" (96 pages).
MONTAGUE MARKS, 23 Union Square, New York.

ARTISTIC JOB PRINTING
A SPECIALTY.
HARRY M. BENSHOFF,
MANUFACTURING STATIONER.
BLANK BOOK MAKER.
HANNAM BLOCK,
Johnstown, Pa.

All That's Claimed
"I had a poor appetite, that tired feeling and was run down, but Hood's Sarsaparilla has done me a great deal of good. I have better appetite and do not feel tired. I can recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as an excellent remedy to keep the blood in order. Myself and three daughters have taken over six bottles, and it has done us much good. We do not now have to call upon a doctor, as formerly, in the spring time, and I can say that Hood's Sarsaparilla has done me a great deal of good. I most heartily recommend it, and shall always keep it in my house." ALBERT KINNEY, Auburn, Pa.
Hood's Sarsaparilla
Be sure to get HOOD'S Cures
Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. Sold by all druggists.

Campbell & Smith.
The Peoples' Store.
We shall be receiving daily during the month of September, large invoices of goods purchased at the various market centers of the world.
These will be placed on sale, as received, on the small profit basis for which this store is noted. Great care has been taken to select only the latest styles and best values in Silks,
Dress Goods,
Suits,
Wraps,
Millinery,
Infants' and Ladies' Underwear
and Hosiery,
Trimmings
and Laces.

Campbell & Smith,
Fifth Avenue,
PITTSBURGH, PA.
Watch the Pittsburgh Daily Papers for Details Day by Day.
MAIL ORDERS RECEIVE CAREFUL ATTENTION.
Jacob D. Swank,
Watchmaker and Jeweler,
Next Door West of Lutheran Church,
Somerset, Pa.
I Am Now prepared to supply the public with Clocks, Watches and Jewelry of all descriptions, as Cheap as the Cheapest.
REPAIRING A SPECIALTY.
All work guaranteed. Look at my stock before making your purchases.
J. D. SWANK,
A. H. HUSTON,
Undertaker and Embalmer.
A GOOD HEARSE,
and everything pertaining to funerals furnished.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE AMERICAN
Behold him!
The irrepressible American on European soil. You'll know him by his black hair, whiskers, or the cheerful smile with which he sheds his cash. He fits across a continent like a prowl. He sees old Rome, Immortal Rome, in eight and forty hours by the watch. The galleries of Florence fill him with rapture for nearly half a day. With coat-tails standing straight out then he flies to Venice, or Berlin, or Switzerland. And sees them from the window of a car. France's proud capital he visits next. And does it thoroughly in one short day. Across the channel now behold him fly. See him in London, where for two whole days he stays.
To Venice, or Berlin, or Switzerland. And sees them from the window of a car. France's proud capital he visits next. And does it thoroughly in one short day. Across the channel now behold him fly. See him in London, where for two whole days he stays.
While waiting for a ship, he looks about and buys a trunk to hold his bric-a-brac. And then some bric-a-brac to fill the trunk. A few choice bits of English cut. He adds some to his wardrobe. Then he is for home, tired, but happy, for his hand-luggage is plastered with the tags of hostilities. All over Europe and, moreover, he has spent about one thousand large, round American Dollars.
Chicago Tribune.

A RUNAWAY MATCH.
Mr. Sheldon was the principal merchant in the important manufacturing town of Torrington. He picked himself up from the fact that he had made it all himself, and he picked himself still more because he had made it by never allowing anybody to get ahead of him.
"That's the secret of success in life, Harry," he said one day to his favorite clerk. "Sharp is the motto, if you wish to rise. I don't mean you should cheat; that, of course, is both wrong and ungentlemanly." (Mr. Sheldon picked himself up as being what he called "a gentleman," and above all little meanness.) "But always be wide awake, and never let anybody cheat you." I've noticed, by the way, that you've seemed rather down-hearted lately. It's because you've your fortune yet to make, don't despair; but follow my advice. An opening will come some time for something better than a clerkship, and though I shall be sorry to lose you, yet I'll give you up, if it's for your interest."
"Thank you," said Harry, apparently not a bit cheered up by this cool way of being told that he had nothing to expect from Mr. Sheldon; "but it's not exactly that, I suppose I shall get along somehow."
"What is it, my dear boy, then? I really take an interest in you, as you know," and he did, so far as words were concerned. "Perhaps I can give you some advice."
"Well," said Harry, with some hesitation, "I'm in love, and—"
"In love?" exclaimed the rich merchant. "In love, and with only a clerk's salary to marry on. It will never do—never do. Harry. Marriage for one like you is fastening a heavy millstone round your neck, unless, indeed, it is stopped as a bright thought had struck him—"unless, indeed, the girl is rich."
"She is rich, or will be, I suppose," answered Harry, "for her father is a wealthy man. But that's just the difficulty. Her father would never let her marry a poor man, and she won't marry without his consent."
"What a miserable tyrant!" said Mr. Sheldon. "Gad! if I had her, I'd run off with her. I'd checkmate the old curmudgeon in that way," and he chuckled at the imaginary triumph he would achieve. "Pon my soul, I would. I never, as I told you, let anybody take a rise out of me."
"But would that be honorable?"
"Honorable? Isn't everything fair in love and war? I thought you had some pluck, Harry. How I would like to see the stingy old hulk rave and stomp about on his gouty toes—for he must be gouty—when he heard of your elopement."
And he laughed till his portly sides shook at the picture he had conjured up.
"He'd probably never forgive me," said Harry, dejectedly. "And what could I do, with a wife brought up to every luxury, and only a poor clerk's salary to support her on?"
"Never forgive you? Trash and nonsense. They do forgive. They can't help it. Besides, with a confidential wink, I think I know your man. It's that skindivil, Meadows. I've heard of you being sweet on his daughter, she's a pretty thing, though she is his child. Oh, you needn't deny it. I saw how you hung about her at our party the other night, and when I joked about it with my daughter the next morning she as good as admitted that it was true, saying that it was a very good match for you. Now, I owe old Meadows a grudge. He tried to get me to marry his daughter, and I mean to pay him for it somehow. I'll tell you what I'll do. I mustn't ask, mind you, the girl is rich. Mum must be the word. I mustn't, of course, be known in the affair; but I'll give you a leave of absence for a month, and a check for fifty pounds to pay for your wedding trip, if you'll make a runaway match. Is it agreed?"
"Well, there's my hand on it. Here's the check, Egad! won't the old rascal howl when he hears how we've done him?"
Harry seemed to hesitate, however, and it was not till Mr. Sheldon, eager to see his old commercial rival put at a disadvantage, had urged him again and again, and promised to stand by him, that he finally consented and took the check which his employer persisted in forcing upon him.
The next morning Mr. Sheldon came down to breakfast in high glee, for a note had reached him while shaving which ran as follows:
DEAR SIR:—I have, with much difficulty, persuaded her to elope. It was wrong, that you would advise her as you were her own father, and she hopes you will stand by us. We shall be married to-morrow, before Mr. Meadows is up.
Very faithfully,
HARRY COSRAD.
The old gentleman brought the note

THEIR WAR RECORD.
133d and 67th Regiments Penn'a Vols.
Survivors of the One Hundred and Thirty-third and Sixty-seventh Regiments, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry held a reunion at Johnstown, on Tuesday, 17th inst. The following brief sketch of the services of these regiments is taken from the Johnstown Tribune, and will be interesting reading.
ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-THIRD. The One Hundred and Thirty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, was recruited during the month of July, 1862, under authority granted by Governor Curtin. Companies A and B were from Johnstown and vicinity, F from Elensburg; G, H, and I from Perry County; C and K from Bedford County, and D and E from Somerset. The companies rendezvoused at Camp Curtin, from the 1st to the 10th of August, 1862, and on the 21st of the same month the following field officers, who had been previously elected by the line officers, were commissioned: Franklin B. Speakman, Colonel; Abraham Kopelin, Lieutenant-Colonel; Edward M. Schrock, Major.
On the 19th the regiment proceeded to Washington to report to General Casey, by whom it was at once ordered forward to Arlington Heights. It was here brigaded with the One Hundred and Twenty-third, One Hundred and Thirty-first, and One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania Regiments, with Colonel Allabach, of the One Hundred and Thirty-first, in command.
On the 27th the regiment was ordered to Alexandria, and from there, on the 29th, out toward the front as far as Fort Ward, the second battle of Bull Run being at this time in full progress.
For the next two weeks it was engaged in picket duty and in throwing up intrenchments. On the 12th of September the regiment moved to Washington with the brigade, which had been strengthened by the addition of the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Pennsylvania Regiment, and was thereafter known as First Brigade, Third Division, Fifth Corps, or Humphrey's Division. There the arms originally received were exchanged for Springfield muskets, and sixty rounds of ammunition per man were issued.
On the 14th the regiment took up the line of march to meet, in Maryland, the defiant enemy, which was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy having retired without attempting to seriously commit the ground farther, the regiment moved forward over the field, covered with the dead and wounded of both armies, and went into camp near Sharpsburg, on the Shepherdstown Road.
It remained here until near the close of October, when the Army moved into Virginia and the Fredericksburg campaign was inaugurated under the leadership of General Milroy, who was threatening the border counties of Pennsylvania. On the morning of the 18th it arrived on the battlefield of Antietam. The regiment was at once formed in line and awaited a renewal of the battle of the previous day.
On the following morning, the enemy