The amateur Sherlock Holmes has added another chapter to his little notebook which records the significance of trifles that are important clews to the doings of the criminal classes. Spots of ink, eigar ashes, marks on the finger and the particles of dust in the folds of an umbrella are all cloquent to this observant seeker after truth as revealing times, places and occurrences in which people may have been engaged. There is a whole literature on the muds of New York and vicinity, their color and consistency and the various degrees of atmospheric moisture under which they will be reduced to a fluid state, while toothpicks and matches as characteristic of various restaurants and localities are full of meaning.

Now it appears, by what the amateur Sherlock Holmes has been revealing in a moment of confidence, that the dead walls of New York, stoops of houses, basement entrances and area gateways are the signposts of the criminal classes, and that what look like the rude scrawlings of boys are in reality the secret symbols by which burglars communicate with each other.

Chalk marks under the edge of one of your front steps may mean that your house has been spotted and will be broken into on a certain date. A rude drawing on the area railings may to the enlightened eye of the initiated mean: "This man has a burglar alarm on his second story windows and keeps a revolver under his pillow, but the silver is in the butler's pantry on the first floor, and the house may be entered through the second basement window, where the The fraternity which has developed of perfection shows considerable ingenuat accuracy of drawing, as that would attract attention. The sign pictures of the burglars are made to look as much like the rude scrawls of schoolboys as Three figures were found scrawled on the gateway of one house. The information thus pictorially conveyed was to the lady, one woman servant and a boy page. That he was a boy page was indicated by buttons on his coat, and the servant was indicated by a short skirt, dotted to resemble a print dress.

Another picture in the notebook of the amateur Sherlock Holmes was more easily deciphered, as it showed merely a fierce bulldog guarding the house, a warning to all members of the fraternity. The next sign, taken from a house in the suburbs, was more mysterious and that the man who lived there went out to business at 9 in the morning and returned at 6 in the evening.

Another picture gathered by the amateur Sherlock Holmes during his painstaking investigation of this subject showed accurate information, as was subsequently discovered, upon the part of the sign writer as to the interior of the house. It indicated that there were three electric bells on the windows, and that one woman servant was employed. A crude drawing taken from under the edge of a stoop indicated that the servant there had been "squared," and this house presumably was just ready to be burglarized. Some of the booty expected to be secured, together with warnings as to possible difficulties to be met with. were indicated by sign pictures of silver spoons, coin and plate, together with the statement that the place was "A1," but there were significant sketches of a dog, a revolver and electric bells to put the thieves upon their guard as to what to expect.

Frequently the burglars, says the amateur Sherlock Holmes, put these sign pictures on houses remote from those to which they refer, and in this case the identity of the latter is revealed by mystericus symbols. This was the case with a rude drawing of a house discovered on a street corner. It represented a tall house with a line barbed with an arrowhead leading to the roof from the street and indicating that the best method of ingress was through the roof. The street and number of this house were also shown by a succession of numerals which only the initiated could understand.

Don't get frightened when you see chalk marks on your front stoop or area gateway. The probabilities are that boys. At the same time examine them closely, and if they seem to point to burglarious intent or design it might not be a ban idea to report the matter to the police. The latter will probably laugh at you among themselves, having not yet developed many Sherlock Holmes propensities, but the fact that the signs have been noticed will, in some mysterious way, soon be known to the crim hals, and those enterprising gentry may be frightened off.—New York World.

Lepers In the World.

According to Malhall, leprosy is far more prevalent in Europe than most people suppose. He says that there are now 3,000 lepers in Portugal, 1,770 in 2,000 all told in other European countries. In India there are 131,000 and in avoirdupois. Canton, China, not less than 10,000. He does not give figures for other countries and islands, but it is estimated that the leper population of the world is but little, if any, short of 1,000,000. Not Sharp Enough.

ABOUT INDIAN MONKEYS. The Method They Employ When Robbing

a Cornfield It is still an article of faith, not only in India, but in all lands where monkeys go in packs, that they have a king. the belief is sound no doubt. But Ibn Batuta tells us, on the authority of the king lives in state. Four noblemen always attend him with rods in their and cooks serve him on their they pull down the houses and beat the people, and their armies, it is said, are many. This is not quite so ridiculous as it looks, for the sacred apes that frequent an Indian village will readily gather to avenge an injury, and it is a common practice with them to destroy the huts when angered.

They have a great many children, and when a child is unlike its father road. Then they are taken by the Hindoes, who teach them every sort of handicraft, or sell them at night, that they may not find their way home.

At Shabar, which appears to have been somewhere near Madras, people dare not travel by night in the woods, for fear of monkeys, which is certainly not exact, since these creatures never move after sundown, but if there be a foundation of truth in the legend it is curious. We are not aware that any Indian apes at this day will attack a passerby unless gravely provoked. But there are plenty elsewhere that will. It is a well known fact that in proceeding to raid the cornfields in certain parts of Africa apes have a combined plan of action. #### THE ORGAN.

Its Peculiar Fitness For the Form of Composition Known as the Fugue.

The organ as it existed in Bach's day, and as in most essentials it exists now, is an instrument peculiarly suggestive complicated, but upon a study it finally | in regard to the realization of the finest resolved itself into the announcement | and most complete effects of harmony. of modulation and of that simultaneous progression of melodies in polyphonic combination which is most completely illustrated in the form of composition known as the fugue. It is so for two or three reasons. In the first place it is the only instrument in which the sounds are sustained with the same intensity for any required length of time after they are first emitted. However long a note may have to be sustained, its full value is there till the moment the finger quits the key, a quality which is invaluable when we are dealing with long suspensions and chains of sound. Secondly, the opportunity of playing the bass with the feet on the pedals, leaving the left hand free for the inner parts, puts within the grasp of a single player a full and extended harmony and a freedom in manip ulation such as no other instrument af fords. Thirdly, and in the case especially of fugue compositions, the immense volume and power of the pedal notes impart a grandeur to the entry of the bass part in the composition such as no other medium for producing music can give us. In the time of Bach this splendid source of musical effect was confined to the great organs of Germany. The English organs of the day had in general no potal board, and it is probably owing to this fact more than to anything else that Handel's published organ music is so light, and even ephemeral in style as compared with Bach's; that he treated the organ, as Spitta truly observes, merely like a larger and more powerful harpsichord. Without the aid of the pedal it would be rather difficult to do otherwise, and the English organ of the day was in every respect a much lighter and thinner affair than the "huge house of the sounds," the thunder of which was stored in the organ they are merely the idiotic scrawls of gallery of many a Lutheran church.-Fortnightly Review.

MAKE LIFE EASY

For the Old Folks--How This Was Done for an Altoona Lady.

Our representative called at 1703 16th street and had a pleasant chat there with an Altoona lady who is 73 years of age and has that to say which will interest old peop'e as well as young. Mrs. E. M. Engle was her name and her case is only an endorsement of many others that have come to our notice. "Yes," said Mrs. Engle, "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and they have cured my back. I have been troubled with kidney ailment for years. For the last six months I was in continual misery, thinking if I did not get help I should not be here long. At different times I have consulted physicians, who have made the startling an-nouncement that my complaint was Bright's disease. Their treatment never seemed to benefit any. My back became almost unbearable with pains across my kidneys. The flesh was sore to the touch; the very weight of my clothes hurt me. I could not turn around with out taking hold of something. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills, thought they might help me. I got some at J. Ross Mateer's drug store and since I have been taking them I am like a different woman. I felt better after the second day of their use. Now I suffer none of that terrible pain whatever, my appetite is improved; I do not have to get up dur-ing the night as formerly. I am 73 years of age and the other day I took a long walk over the hills, something which I was unable to do before taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I wish the proprietors of so great a remedy every success with all
