FARMER BROWN AND JUSTICE.

Good farmer Brown in years long past has been a stream bed east. And when good cash had no hold down by selling chickens to the town. Prime, plump and tender were they all and brought him prices never small. But, sad to tell, there sometimes came Will Hoke that will destroyed the name. This carried off all manner of soap. And this carried off his children's soap. For having years he has been well, but cut off last week he took. So with him and his wife and son. He found himself a chicken man.

round-faced clock on the front of the gallery softly ticking its subdued 'nances' all through the service. Our preacher has been down East a good many years teaching preachers how to preach, so we may get back to the life-size sermons and whole hymn-sing.

Well, that choir was so praised and lauded, and deservedly so, that at last it exalted its horn "like the horn of an unicorn" and decided to take entire charge of the musical portion of the services. The leader, a young man with sublime confidence, a splendid voice, long curling hair tacked under at the ends, as was the fashion with young men of that day, like the Jack of spades if you know what that is, and a wealth of bear's grease, flavored with bergamot came to the preacher and said: "Mr. Scobee, I must have the hymns for Sunday service on Friday morning hereafter. I have changed rehearsal from Saturday to Friday evening."

THE STRIKE IN THE CHOIR.

BY ROBERT J. FERDINTE.

When I was a boy, away back in the years when the days were so short that it took fourteen or fifteen of them to make a week, I attended divine services with my parents in an old Baptist church in Peoria. My legs were short and the pew was high, and while I listened to the sermons and singing I used to wonder how many hundred years it would be ere I could reach the floor with my feet as my father did. There were two foot-stools in the pew, but it was considered wicked for a boy to put his feet on one of them. They were made exclusively for grown up people who did not need them. They were also used to trap the unwary stranger who came sliding softly and sideways into the pew without an invitation. He fell over one and kicked the other. That notified the worshippers in the front pews that there was a stranger under our gates and they could turn around and look at him. But for this automatic system of signaling, many a devout woman would have gone home without knowing the particular kind of clothing the stranger wore.

of the stanzas, intending to wail him and head him off on the second. Vain hope. They did not know his past. He drew but one song deep breath at the end of the closing line, and went right on with the next verse, developing cumulative power with the exhilaration of his work, until he wound up the long hymn with a long drawn halloo that sounded like a cross between a war-whoop and a halloo. "Oh, by the way, the choir set down as that, the funniest hymn progressed, but the congregation, although not venturing to 'assist,' stood by most nobly while Deacon Standfast lustily sang his first and last solo in that church. I believe he never sang again; not even in chorus."

After that break, however, all went fairly well for several weeks, maybe a month. Then the congregation stood up at eight o'clock one Sunday night and sang.

"One more, my soul, the rising day salutes thy waking eyes."
And once the morning service opened with the hymn,
"Lord, thou art ever with the blessing."
But as not more than a singer in a hundred, perhaps, sing a hymn with any thought of its meaning, simply considering the words as rather useless necessities, merely put in to vocalize the music, the incongruity of the selection did not strike more than three out of four beside the preacher, and they were not present. But the Sunday morning following that, the leader came to the preacher before service, with a troubled face and said:

"Look here, Mr. Scobee, this will never do at all."

"Well, what is the matter now?"

"Well," said the leader, "this opening hymn, 'When I awake in the morning,' is a hymn that is no longer used in this church in the past six weeks, and that was old Doud Swearingen, who got so mad yesterday while he was beating his horse with a pick handle that he fell down in a fit and died in two minutes—a man with the worst temper in the State of Illinois. We can't sing that, Mr. Scobee."

"What a splendid sight that might have had two shades of meaning in it. He may have been pleased to meet a hymn without appropriate words is about as vile and strong as a human body without a skeleton. Or he may have been pleased about something else. Anyhow, he smiled without permitting a gleam of triumph to shine across his face. He said, 'Very well,' and selected hymns for morning and evening service."

There was never again the shadow of trouble between the choir and the pulpit in that church. Other leaders came and went. The choir changed, as do all churches; but the choir never again was a man without appropriate words is about as vile and strong as a human body without a skeleton. Or he may have been pleased about something else. Anyhow, he smiled without permitting a gleam of triumph to shine across his face. He said, 'Very well,' and selected hymns for morning and evening service."

How Merit is Rewarded in the Egyptian Army.

Kassim Pasha, when Minister of War for Egypt, was very particular with regard to the personal appearance of his officers, and issued stringent orders that they should never appear unshaven in public. One day he met in the street a Lieutenant who had 'bearded' the Pasha and disregarded his order.

"What regiment do you belong to?" demanded the indignant Minister.

"To the—Regiment of Abyssinians," replied the frightened Lieutenant, and "Get into my carriage at once, so that I can carry you to the encampment, and have you publicly punished," was the stern command which followed.

Carrie's Blander.

Little Carrie had been instructed to learn a Scripture verse with the word 'good' in it. Accordingly her parents taught her. "It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day."

The little maid repeated her text many times softly to herself before the beginning of the general exercise, in which all the Sunday school classes were to join. When her turn came she sent a ripple over the audience by reciting in clear but lisping accents:

"It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day."

A Bachelor's Lament.

There is one class of individuals whom I despise utterly and irrevocably. For thirty years I have been making up my mind to say I hate my chambermaid, and the following are some of my reasons:

She sends my fresh pajamas to the laundry and leaves her chambermaid on a chair for a week, where the dust settles on them.

She hangs my dress coat by the middle of its back on a sharp hook, and folds my trousers just outside the new crease the tailor has just put in.

She takes all my matches for the old boarder's room.

She jams my trunk up against the wall, no matter how often I pull it out so that the lid will stay open she yanks it up to the wall again.

She carefully cherishes for me all the old patent medicine circulars and old duns, which I have grown bald trying to get rid of, and lights the fire with my important business letter.

Not a Target.

In a New England courtroom one afternoon an energetic counsel was setting forth in no measured terms his opinion of certain testimony which had been given by one of the witnesses.

Mark Twain's Yell.

Mark Twain, who recently started on a tour around the world, told an interviewer at Winnipeg how he often felt a desire to "cut loose" from civilization and to get away by himself where he could "yell and yell to his heart's content." In this connection there is a story about the humorist and Canon Kingsley. Walking along the street one day, Mark felt the impulse to yell coming on him with irresistible force, and said to Kingsley, "I want to yell, I must yell." The canon said, "All right, yell away; I don't mind."

An Important Question.

A short time ago a large factory, fitted with the most modern appliances, including the electric light, caught fire and despite the most strenuous efforts of the fire brigade was almost demolished.

The following morning a newly appointed member of the force was dispatched to the spot, with a view of ascertaining how the fire originated.

After closely interrogating the manager of the factory he asked to see the man who was responsible for the electric light.

The manager stated that the electric switches were under his sole control. Then you are the man that lights up the electric affair?

Now, be careful how you answer my next question, 'as if it ain't satisfactory it will be took as evidence against you. When you lighted the electric light last night, where did you throw the match?

LINCOLN AS A LAWYER.

When Right He'll Beat You; When Wrong, You Must Be Careful!

"Abraham Lincoln," said Senator Voorhees recently, "was known to me long before he ever came to the White House, or I dreamed of Congress. I remember him when I was a young man as a tall, angular figure, with a shaggy shock of dark hair, who used to ride the circuit as a lawyer, and whose business occasionally brought him as far as my law office in Indiana. Even in an early day Lincoln had considerable fame as a successful trial lawyer. His trial stories as effectively then as he did in after years, when a President, his stories were bound to be a success. He was a singularly good talker to juries, and had that convincing gift which few men possess of talking with his audience rather than to it. Most speakers talk 'to' an audience, Lincoln talked 'with' his, and that with his homely rhetoric, through which ran an eternal current of sentiment, was the real secret of his victories."

"Few lawyers cared to meet Lincoln on even terms. Even when he had a weak case he was dangerous. Douglas once said of him: 'When Lincoln is right you can't best him, when he is wrong you must be a—d— careful or he'll beat you. This makes a strong man of Lincoln.' Douglas was right, and the history of his later collisions with Lincoln on the stump, and final great contest with him at the ballot box, might go a long way toward proving it."

"Lincoln was a man of tremendous physical strength. He had long general arms, and was as powerful as an ox. It was the common practice of lawyers in that day to put in the noon hour in wrestling, leaping and running. Lincoln was unquestionably the champion wrestler of his time and circuit. No one ever succeeded in getting him on his back. With Lincoln's strength and facility for physical exercises, it should be no wonder that he was a famous rail-splitter."

Know Thyself.

How important this injunction to every young man! How many ruin their health and future happiness through pernicious practices contracted in ignorance and repented of when too late. Parents, guardians and humanitarians can do no better service to the rising generation, than to place in their hands the information and warnings contained in a little book carefully prepared by an association of medical gentlemen, who have had vast experience in dealing with the grave maladies here hinted at, and who feel that they owe it to humanity to warn the young of the land against certain destructive habits which are far more prevalent than any layman can possibly imagine, and which, if persisted in, gradually undermine the constitution and health, and destroy the future happiness of the victim. Cut out this notice and enclose it with ten cents in stamps (to pay postage to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 635 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y., and the book will be sent, secure from observation in a plain sealed envelope.

A Good Deal.

It is said that "one pound of gold may be drawn into a wire that would extend around the globe." So one good deed may be felt through all time, and cast its influence in eternity. A deed that the humanist Christian, even a little child, can perform, may set a wave of influence in motion that will go on extending through time, touching many lands, and sweeping over the boundary line of earth, pour the wealth of Isaac-cumulatious into the real eternal.

One Form of Introduction.

The teacher of an intermediate grade in one of the larger public schools was "showing off" her pupils before a number of visitors. The spelling class was on the floor, and one small stock-headed boy was given the word "introduction." He paused, twisted his lips, and then in a faltering way spelled it correctly, and seemed rather surprised that he had done it.

"Do you know what the word means?" asked the teacher.

"No'm."

"Well, now, I'll explain it to you. Does your mother ever have callers?"

"Yes'm."

"Well, now, suppose that two ladies came to call on your mother. Your mother knows one of the ladies, but doesn't know the other. She has never seen the other lady and doesn't even know her name. Now, how would she become acquainted with this lady and find out her name?"

"She'd send me out for a can o' beer."

As that was the correct answer the teacher had nothing further to say.—Chicago Record.

Good Advice.

If you have made up your mind to live in a town then stand up for it. Say all the good things you can about it, and if you know positively no good, then silence in regard to its merits is considered golden. Do what you can to help along every man who is engaged in business. Don't send away for everything you want and still expect the home man to keep a stock to suit the whim of one or two possible customers. The success of your town-men will be your success. No man lives to himself, no man dith to himself, and no man does business independent of his fellow business man. Take your home paper. Don't imagine that big dimes fill up all the space. There are many little pieces of good cheer, social sunshine, personal mention in a home paper that the big dimes do not care for and do not print. Don't abuse your neighbor. The main difference in the number of his faults and yours is that you see through a magnifying glass as a critic. That ill-omened bird, the creaker, can do a town more harm in a minute than two good citizens can repair in a month.

Dictionary of Discontent.

Science, dear Lady Betty, has diminished hope, knowledge has destroyed our illusions, and experience has deprived us of interest. Here, then, is the authorized dictionary of discontent:

What is creation? A failure.

What is life? A bore.

What is man? A fraud.

What is woman? Both a fraud and a bore.

What is beauty? A deception.

What is love? A disease.

What is marriage? A mistake.

What is a wife? A trial.

What is a child? A nuisance.

What is the devil? A failure.

What is good? Hypocrisy.

What is evil? Deception.

What is wisdom? Selfishness.

What is friendship? Humbug.

What is generosity? Imbecility.

What is money? Everything.

What is everything? Nothing.

In The Scientific World.

We are told that paper gloves and proper stockings are the latest departure. They are not, it is alleged, thin, rotten things, either, like some wool, cotton or silk, but quite tough. Paper towels, which has long been known, is touched by machinery so as to seem fuzzy, like wool, and it is then knitted to shape just as it were yarn. As paper stockings will be retained about three weeks a pair, it will cost no more to buy new ones than to have the old ones washed.

The Pittsburg Dispatch describes Rivington's new "color organ." This instrument is designed to put into precise certain elements in the undulatory theory of light which promise that the rates of vibration producing different colors vary in the same ratio as the intervals in vibrations producing musical notes. Each key in the keyboard corresponds to the color answering to the piano note of that key. The description of the effects produced is most fascinating. While some of Chopin's preludes were being played the color screen was "flooding with successive rhythmic waves of harmonious color, from simple to complex, growing scarlet, gold deepening to orange, exquisite half-tones in mauve, grays, browns and transparent blue." The new idea is to combine in the same instrument the relations between the spectrum and the octave and to demonstrate graphically that each harmony in sound is accompanied by its appropriate harmony in light.
