CHAS. H. FISHER. ... Queer Conduc: of a Stranger at Berlin.

Mention was made in last week's HERALD of the admission of one John Donahue, who was suffering with frozen feet and hands, to the County Home. The following information in regard to the unfortunate sufferer is taken from the Berlin Record: Thursday evening of last week a stranger was observed on the streets who doing that he casts a foul imputation attracted some attention on account of the aimless method in which he walked It is indeed incredible that the men of about. We mistake the temper he was hunting for his brother Will who had been drowned. Both his actions and his brother was drowned at Wilson's bridge, wherever that may be. At one time he passed where some men were loading a car on the main track of the branch and meeting the train afterwards signaled and called for it to stop, and when the train did stop he informed evaductor Sease that there was a train ahead and they should look out for it. At another time he rode with the men on a hand car and afterwards picked up the dinner pails and inspected them and asked where his was. He was seen at different points wading the creek and feeling about with his feet and hands, Saturday morning he was found near Altfather's saw mill lying by the creek with his feet hanging in the water, and his clothing frozen fast to the snow. He was hatless and without his overcoat, having lost them somewhere. H. D. Altfather took him home and Sunday | work hard to please you.
