THE REVOLUTIONARY PREACHER.

From a lecture delivered in the Preskyterian Church, Somerset, Pa., on Sumlay evening, March 8, 1891. Subject: "Presbyterianism and Patrestism."

Rev. T. J. Bristour, in the course of his Rev. I. J. Bristow, in the course of his fecture, related the following incident in connection with the Herolinsboary War. Daring the reading of the patricite description by Brot Hart there was the closest and most interested affection.

Perhaps the next absuration of the Perhaps the next absuration of the Presbyterian proachers of Revolutionary days will be Rev. Junes Caldwell, of Elizabethbown, N. J. His neighbors said of him that 'he preached and fought el-ternately.'

"The Revolutionary soldiers were arm-ed with old-fushioned musikets, which needed paper wadding rammed down be-twist the powder and the load of shot. buring the attack on Springfield the wadding gave out, and Caldwell ran to the church and filled his arms with Watta psalm books, and, going back, scattered them among the soldiers, shouting: "Now, boys, give them Watta," Irritated by his efficiency, a large reward was accounted by the British for his contract. promised by the British for his capture. Falling to get him, the soldiery set fire to his church, and his wife was shot through the window of her own room. Her blend-ing corpse was afterwards dragged into the street. The story is feld this way by Bret Hart, and there is certainly inspirathe four were buried at one place, on the Addison side of the river, with a tion and patriotism in his pscaliar

> How The Prince Was Converted. Greek faith, was an interesting cere mony. It took place at Sofia on February 14. Prince Ferdinand took his stand upon the dais before the throne. The Ministers left their places and went to the church door, whence they returned escorting Prince Boris, borne in the arms of his governante, who after divesting him of his broad white hat and plisse, placed him on the throne seat nearest the altar, where he > sat in perfect composure, wearing halfa-dozen orders over his white frock. The Bishops had previously moved back to the altar screen. An Archoishop, accompanied by four Bishops, came from the west end of the church, bearing aloft the casket containing the hrism, which he carried to the altar. Then the Exarch came and confrontd the little Prince, who maintained his self-possession while his imperial god-father by proxy, in the person of deneral Cutuzoff, stepped on the dias
