Where are the Tacks?

"Where do the pins go to?" is a common saying, but when one takes a few notes of the tack industry, the question, "Where do all the tacks go to?" seems to be the next thing in order.

The first tacks were made by hand. the head was made by striking a blow Chicago Tribune. with a hammer. Later on machinery began to be used, and now metal is fed into an enormous apparatus that will cut out nearly 300 tacks a minute. The processes are extremely interesting and a tack factory has many visitors. The machinery is automatic; narrow strips headaches yield to its influence. We of metal are fed in and clipped off, the heads are made by preasure, and it literally rains tacks into large boxes In cases of habitual constipation Elecplaced underneath to receive them. They are then poured into a rattler, which is a rapidly revolving cylinder, through which a jet of air is forced under high pressure. This removes all of the dust and loose particles. Black lead is sometimes put in to give them a polish, and then they pass on to the sifter, which sorts them and takes out the imperfect tacks, leaving the good ones to be passed on and dropped into a box, from which they are taken to be packed by quickfingered girls. A good workwoman can pack 1,600 pounds of class in mental science, which is finishtacks in a day. When one realizes that any the more abstruse courses with the many of these machines are going, and that the tacks at this rate are being sent out to market, the wonder grows where all the tacks go to .- New York

Ex President Harrison's Wedding,

Perhaps as simple a wedding as has ver been witnessed in St. Thomas' church, New York, was solemnized half an hour before six o'clock Monday evening, April 6th, when General Harrison married Mrs. Mary Scott Lord Dimmick. Not one of the thirty-six favored witnesses of the ceremony could fall to have been impressed with its singular unpretentiousness.

The crowds outside the church showed the interest the public had in the affair. Secrecy as to the exact hour of the ceremony had been carefully maintained, which in a measure served to check the growth of the curious. Then too, the weather was not inviting mough even to the curious.

The guests began to arrive shortly before five o'clock and were received by the two ushers, the private Secretary of the ex-president, E.P. Tibbott, and Daniel M. Ramsdell. The ushers were the conventional frock coats, violets, and white gloves. Mrs. John F. Parker, the bride's sister, occupied a front pew on the left and Mr. and Still the seene seemed cold and almost gloemy. One could hardly renlize that a wedding of national importance was about to be solemnized. It was five o'clock when General nev, his best man, entered a carriage at the Fifth avenue hotel and started for the church, where they arrived at 5.20 o'clock. They entered through the rector's residence on Third street and went directly to the vestry where he awaited the arrival of the bride. Where Does Our Heat Come From?

There is a great deal of contention concerning the way in which we get our heat from the sun. Some scienttime wasted between their intervals of lists say it is due to reflection, others that it is compared to a hot bed in which young fruit is reared. If we take the theory that it is due to the reflection of the sun's rays it will not hold good for this reason; in the winter, when the ground is covered with It's a good deal easier to increase the snow, the sun's rays would be reflected with greater power than in the summer because white is a greater reflector The purse proud man doesn't object | than black; all the difference the sun's position in winter and summer would make, would not amount to much as far as reflection is concerned. Taking the theory of the hot bed, if we examforesight so long that it sagged in the line the hot bed we will find that the sun's rays will penetrate the glass and cause a heat in there which will not escape back through the glass, that it will cause a heat which after being changed by the action of the rays on the soil it can not penetrate the glass.
