Bantus or Kaffirs -These Last Are Much Above the Level of the Others Physical-either of colonization or of conquest, but for the sake of having gardens which could supply fresh vegetables to the scurvy stricken crews of their ships sailing to the east, they found three native races inhabiting the country. One of these, the Busnmen, though few in numbers, were widely scattered over the whole of South Africa. They were nomads of almost the lowest kind, with a marvelous faculty for tracking and trapping wild animals, but neither owning cattle nor tilling the soil, with scarcely even a tribal organization, no religion and a language consisting of a succession of clicks. Unable to accustom themselves to civilized life, driven out of some districts by the settlers and in others no longer able to find support owing to the extinction of game, they are now almost extinct, though a few are still left in the deserts of the Kalahari and northern Bechuanaland. Before many years the only trace of their existence will be in the remarkable drawings of animals with which they delighted to cover the smooth surfaces of rocks. These drawings, which are found all the way from Zambezi to the Cape and from Maniacland to the Atlantic, are executed in red and yellow pigments and are often full of spirit

The second race was that which the Dutch called Hottentot. They were of a reddish or yellowish black hue, taller than the Bushmen, but with squat and seldom muscular figures-a thoughtless, cheerful, easy going people, who roved hither and thither with their flocks and herds as they could find pasture. They were decidedly superior to the Bushmen, whom they hated, but quite unable to withstand Europeans, and their numbers rapidly declined, partly from the loss of their best grazing grounds, but largely also through epidemic diseases, and especially smallpox, which ships, touching on their way from India, brought into the country. They are now, as a distinct race, almost extinct in the Colony, though a good deal of their blood has passed into the mixed black population of Cape Town and its neighborhood-a population the other elements of which are Malays and west coast negroes, the descendants of slaves imported in the last century. Farther north, on the south side of the Orange river, and beyond it in Namagualand, small tribes cognate to the Hottentots still wander over the dreary plains. Very different from these weak Bushmen and Hottentots was and is the third native race, those who are called Bantu (a word meaning "people") by themselves and Kaffirs by Europeans. The word Kaffir is Arabic, and means an infidel (literally "one who denies"). It is applied by Mussulmans not merely to these South Africans, but to other heathen, as, for instance, by the Afghans to the idolaters of Kafiristan in the Hindoo-Kush mountains. The Portuguese probably took the name from the Arabs, whom they found already settled on the east coast. These Bantu tribes-if we may class those as Bantus who speak languages of what is called the Bantu type-fill all east Africa from the regions of the upper Nile southward.

are generally strong and well made men, sometimes as black as a gulf of Guinea negro, sometimes verging on a brown tint; and though they have the woolly hair and thick lips generally characteristic of the negro, individuals are often found among them whose cast of features suggests an admixture of Semitic blood. Major Moore's office in the District building is a curiosity shop. He has there a collection of articles used by the criminals who have been run down by the metropolitan police; but there is one particular article among them that is probably the center of interest. In appearance it resembles an umbrella that has seen much service, or if might at Cape Town in 1652, with no thought be taken for a stage umbrella, such as

This imitation umbrella was formerly the property of a burglar, and it was by its means that he was able to enter the second story of a building. Removing the cover, a stick wound with rope is revealed. The stick opens like a tolescope or a jointed fish pole. Wound around it is a rope ladder, made of strong material and about 13 feet in length. The ladder is only wide enough for one foot to be placed on the rounds. The extending stick was used to raise one end of the ladder to the window through which the operator wished to enter, and on one end of the ladder are two hooks to be fastened to the sill. The contrivance was taken from a colored burglar named James Moore, who is now serving out a 20 years' sentence in

> Moore was first arrested about ten years ago. It was then that he made use of the ladder to gain admittance to the houses that tempted him. He was an eld sailer, and while on board ship he learned the art of making and splicing rope. Entering the field of crime, he conceived the idea of the rope ladders. It is regarded as one of the most ingenious affairs ever made use of by a thief. He carried no other tools, as he was what is known in police circles as "summer thief," one who works when windows are left open. Moore operated alone, as he was afraid to trust a "pal."-Washington Post.

Quixote is at least interesting, and even amusing. More than this, he is of practical service. His daring unreasonableness stirs up stagnating waters and relieves the gray monotony of common sense. Perhaps we regard him with the pity that is akin to contempt, and call him fanatic, enthusiast; but so have we called the prophets that were before him. Enthusiasm now is rather out of fash-ion, like duels and hard drinking; and to call a man enthusiastic is almost as great an insult as to call him genteel. And so we look askance at Quixotry, because it is not the "mode." But perhaps we rather ought to weep that it is so much a thing of the past, and cherish those few instances of it that remain; not only because of its artistic value, but because where the more sober thinker fails, the Quixote is often of service. Madras Thunderstorms. As the result of his prolonged study of those striking phenomena, the thun-derstorms of Madras, Professor Smith informs the Scottish Meteorological society that the first remarkable fact observed by him was that of certain seasons of the year when sheet lightning appeared almost every night, always in a west or southwesterly direction and invariably near the horizon; it may be, therefore, he remarks, that these discharges occur in the region where the moist and dustless sea wind meets the dry and dusty land wind, one being, perhaps, positively electrified and the other negatively. In these lightning dis-plays as many as 300 flashes per minute have been counted, this rate being kept up for an hour or an bour and a half. Another notable peculiarity remarked of this region is that the heaviest rains are unaccompanied by thunder, while the displays of lightning are not accompanied by any rain.

As a remedy for all forms of Headache Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try it once. Fifty cents and $1.00 at J. N. Snyder's drug store, Somerset, or at Brallier's drug store, Berlin.

If rats infest the barn fill a tight barrei half fuil of rye and other grain, and give them a treat for a fortnight, placing a board against the barrel for easy access. Some night substitute water for the grain, leaving enough of the latter on top to deceive, and the results may astonish you. Moreover, the rats will leave that barn for months
