WHEN SHADOWS FALL.

When shadows fall I find them more, loved one, than their' the light," answered the boy. "I say, with an abrupt change of subject, "why can't the kid say grace this morning? He is the youngest member of the party."

WHEN SHADOWS FALL.

When shadows fall The gloom of endless sorrow sweeps around And starts a throbbing fresh some unhealed wound And crushing, bears me to the ground. When shadows fall, Dim ghosts of long ago, with haunting tread, With sighing eyes of ones long dead And touch, regretfully, my low bowed head.

UNCLE TED'S MASCOT.

From St. Nicholas for June.

It had been decided that Bob should not go to see the races on Thanksgiving Day. As Bob was only four years old, there had not been much doubt felt in the family as to the propriety of allowing "the kid" to witness the athletic games. "Uncle Ted," as Bob called him, Theodore, as he was known to the rest of the world—had determined views on the subject. He was to be one of the contestants in the 40-yard dash, to the uninitiated, the quarter-mile dash and he was certain that the younger crowd would stay at home.

WHEN SHADOWS FALL.

When shadows fall I long to enter in a world unknown, A dreamer's world where I should roam alone In Lethe's waters there I'd forget my name.

Arthur J. Sewall would have made a proper and ornamental tail-end on a ticket with Maj. McKinley, but with Bryan he is a misfit.

THE "CRIME OF 1873."

From the Philadelphia Record. (Dem.)

Candidate Bryan announces that he will open his Free Silver campaign in New York, and that it will be an aggressive campaign from the start. This implies great courage on the part of Mr. Bryan; for there are in New York some people who are quite capable of thoroughly exposing his Free Silver fallacies, while there are few people in that city, or in any other part of the east, who are likely to lose their heads in listening to such rhetorical flourishes as the "crown of thorns upon the brow of labor" and the "crucifying of mankind upon a cross of gold."

An Uncooked Egg Will Not Spin.

A well-known sea captain was eating his luncheon of boiled eggs at a downtown restaurant the other day, when he surprised those at the same table by calling to the waiter: "Waiter, what do you mean by bringing me uncooked eggs?" "The eggs have been boiled, sir," said the waiter.

Artificial Sunrise.

Dairyman Wilder, whose milk-producing establishment is about ten miles north of Santa Cruz, is one of the most ingenious men in all California, and has done what no other dairyman ever attempted. Everybody that has ever tried to milk a cow before daylight knows what a job it is. Bossey is generally of the opinion that there is a time for all things, and firmly objects to being awakened and milked when she thinks she should be asleep. Many cows will refuse to be milked to the extent of kicking and lying down.

Property.

Years ago in New Hampshire there were three commissioners appointed to examine candidates for admission to the bar. At one time the commissioners were Jeremiah Mason, the ablest lawyer in the state, Mr. Sullivan and another member of the bar. Of a certain candidate who presented himself for examination, Mr. Willard tells this story in his book, "Half a Century with Judges and Lawyers."

Effect of the Circus.

"I fear you had the circus in your town the other day." "Yes." "I suppose the children were wild?" "They were—and I doubt if we can ever tame 'em again. Bobbie's got a won't sleep unless he's standing on his head."—Harper's Bazar.

It is Different Now.

Hodge—"Too bad that you have to work nights in addition to the long hours you put in during the day." Hens—"Oh, I don't have to work nights. I get through at 5 o'clock every day." Hodge—"Why, your wife told me that you had to work until 11 or 12 o'clock every night?" Hens—"Yes, but you know my wife's away from home now."

The Demonstration of Iron.

Alexander P. Hull, of Atlanta, is a strong 16 to 1 man. He does not believe in half-way measures. The free coinage of silver idea is too tame for him. He is willing to see the silverites and to go them 100 points better. Here are his declaration, proposition and argument.

"Having been deeply impressed by the arguments of Judge Crisp, Bryan, Stewart, Jones and other silver leaders, and especially silver, shocked and horrified by the awful crime of 1873, as so luridly depicted daily in the columns of the Atlanta Constitution and other silver organs, I have changed my views on the money question, and am ready to maintain the propositions following in joint debate or newspaper controversy.

"I accept the argument of the advocates of silver and agree with their remedy as far as it goes. However, it does not go far enough. Let us have plenty of remedy—in fact, enough to make debt and poverty things of the open market. Atlanta Constitution.

"Now, in the first place, it may be argued by some 'who do not understand the subject of standard of value,' that a free coinage act of iron would raise its price to a ratio of 16 to 1 with gold. To them I reply that 'the stamp of this government' and the 'legal tender qualities' of the iron dollar would instantly make the bullion value of pig iron the same as the mint value of gold. To such, I say, 'Atlanta Constitution.'"

"Again, it may be urged that our mint would be overworked with pig iron. I reply that the price of pig iron having been raised from $7.50 a ton to a ratio of 16 to 1 with gold the world over, 'no one would especially care to carry it to the mints, since the mint price could be obtained anywhere in the open market.' Atlanta Constitution.

"Such an assumption mixes the idea of circulating medium and standard of value; gold and silver would still be potential money metals, though not in circulation, and would lend their help toward raising prices and causing general prosperity." (Crisp.)

"Then, again, it may be urged against the pig iron standard of value that wages would not rise in proportion to prices. The reply is, 'Wages would rise in proportion to the standard of value.' Next it may be urged that gold and silver would go out of circulation. I reply, first, 'This is a mere assumption of the tools of the money power which they cannot verify.' (Atlanta Constitution); second, 'Suppose gold and silver do go out of circulation, is there not plenty of pig iron to take their place and give the people plenty of money?' Atlanta Constitution.

"A ruinous fall in prices followed the demonetization of iron and has continued for upward of 200 years. I have calculated the losses sustained upon the honest people of this world by that ruinous act, but the figures are so enormous I fear a revolution will ensue if the people learn how greatly they have been robbed. But facts are facts, and the best way to right a wrong is to meet it squarely. That loss is $211,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000." (Coin's Financial School.)

"In conclusion, I insist that the free coinage of silver will do everything that is claimed for silver and infinitely more. The people will be rich and prosperous. The once poor man can pay his debts with his old stove. Railroads can declare a dividend on old rails and worn-out rolling stock. The small boy can pick up old nails and horseshoes enough to support his family. In fine, poverty and debt can no longer exist."

London Meat Inspection. All meat that is declared unfit for food by the official inspectors in London is immediately removed to the condemned meat shed in the Central market at Smithfield. Here is a series of tanks made of thick slabs, and each with a capacity of 600 gallons. The meat is first slashed and disfigured, and then subjected to a chemical bath which has the effect not only of discoloring and deodorizing it, but also of stopping decomposition.
