The conference opened in a farce a Bedford some six weeks ago, when Mr. Kooser appeared with three conferees from Somerset, Mr. Evans with the same number from Cambria, Mr. Thropp with the same number from Bedford and Mr. and three additional ones from Bedford, laiming that he was the duly nominated candidate of the latter county. From Bedford an adjournment was had to Tyrone, at which place a number of days were fruitlessly spent in trying to organize the conference. Evans and Thropp were willing to organize providing the Thropp conferees were admitted to the Kooser's residence. conference. Kooser and Hicks would only agree to an organization which would admit the Hicks conferees from

Bedford county. From Tyrone the Evans-Thropp conferees adjourned to Altoona, where they went into conference. The Hicks-Kooser onferees-three for Hicks from Bedford and Blair each-organized at Tyrone, where they evolved that wonderful rule in mathematics that in a conference of nine conferees it takes seven to make a other things he said : unjority. Knoser's three conferens voted for Kooser; Hicks' six voted for Hicks, for days ; strange to relate no nomination was made. At length, growing weary of this sort of diverting amusement, the four candidates mutually agreed to submit to State Chairman Elkin's decision the question as to who was rightfully entitled to the conferees from Bedford county. Argument was made before the State Chairman at Huntingdon, who, with a keenness of vision and fairness of mind that would have put Solomon of old to the blush, gravely decided that the six Bedford county conferees should be admitted to the deliberations of the conference with one half a vote each-11 votes for Hicks and 14 votes for Thropp. The conference thus composed of fifteen
