TRIES THE NERVES.

AN OLD FIREMAN ON THE EFFECT OF A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

The Thoughts That Flash Through the Engineman's Brain Just Before a Collision Occurs -- A Smash Up Makes a Man Scary Ever Thereafter.

There is something attractive about railread life to the man who once enters it. The railroad companies rarely give up a reliable, faithful man. He may become maimed and unfit for the most remunerative positions and be forced to accept some humbler place with a smaller salary attacked to it, but it is an unwritten law with most of the great railroad companies that the man who is injured in their service shall be placed in some position where he may obtain his livelihood.

Thus it may happen that when you fall in conversation with the man who occupies a humble switchhouse or a flagman's shanty you are talking with one who has had his share of excitement and been through experiences that would make the hair of the average man stand upon end. A reporter met a switchman the other day the pathes of whose life was expressed in the wooden leg which he used, and as the Empire dashed by he looked up and said: "Yes, I like railroading. I have been in the business all my life and expect to spend the rest of my days over the rails, but I am quite content to remain here in my little cottage and tend to my flagging rather than have the position of the man who holds the throttle on that big engine which just whizzed by here, You may think it a snap to sit there and ride over the country at the rate of a mile a minute, but I tell you the man carries a load of responsibility on his shoulders which I would not want on mine and which the average man knows very little about. I know something of it, for I was fireman some years ago en one of the fast engines and lost my leg in an accident between here and Albany. But if I had come out of that accident as sound as you are I never slow about it." should have been able to hold my nerve for any more fast trips. That finished me for that work."

"Then if a man has been hurt in a railroad accident it makes him scary | Well, it was enough to try anybody's of that kind of work, does it?" asked

"You bet it does," answered the the rudiments of landlord and tenant switchman with emphasis, "and don't law. I cited Pebbles versus Bubbles, let any one fool you that it doesn't. The and it knocked him out. Where are you man who was running that engine the day I was hurt escaped with bardly a scratch, but he never could keep his matter on hand today!" was the reply. time up the way he did before that and finally was put on a freight engine, know whether I'll consent or not. I've where the running was a great deal

"I shall never forget the way he looked the afternoon the smash up occurred. Just before the crash came I looked at him. We were rounding a curve down by Schenectady. His long gray hair was flowing in the breeze, his face was set and his eyes fixed on the track

"All at once he jumped to his feet and reversed the lever and exclaimed in as his face reddened. "I don't want to a startled tone, 'My God, we are be talking about that down here. I'm caught!' It was probably not more than half a minute after when I was lying beneath the engine with my leg crushed, utterly unconscious of the fact that a great wreck had occurred, but every movement and occurrence of that half minute is as vividly impressed upon my mind as if it had taken weeks of time to impress it there.

"As he spoke I looked through the cab window ahead of us, and there. within 20 rods, was a freight engine coming straight at us, and there was no possible chance to escape a crash. The engineer was doing his duty. I knew that. He was reversing the lever, applying the brakes and doing his best to avert what he knew was inevitable, but I had nothing to do, and it seemed as if everything in my life was before me in these few seconds. I felt absolutely sure I was going to die. Strange as it may seem, the thought did not seem horrible to me. A whole lot of the slang sayines, such as, 'You are learning to fire here in this world so as to be prepared for the next,' and 'You won't mind a hot job over there,' and a number of those stale things which a fireman has to take, came into my head, and even in that awful position it occurred to me in a humorous sort of way that I had made a good start here below, or here above, as I might say. The next moment I was thinking of my wife and children-yes, and of mother, too, who had been dead a number of years. A man always thinks of his mother at such a time. But I don't think I had a particle of fear of death. The last thing that was on my mind was the question, Who was to blame for the accident? And that is the last I remember.

"When I came to my senses, I was in a hespital and was minus a leg. Since then I have been constantly empleyed one way and enother by the railroad company, Lat 1 never see one of the fast trains go 17 without thinking of that wreck. The curincer miraculously escaped with a a ly a bruise, but it finished him for the kind of work. He was always seeing car as ahead of him after that, and I have beard that more than once he has sleve a up his train in order not to collide with an imaginary engine, which I have no doubt was as Therefore a special act of parliament real to him as it was on the afternoon the wreck I speak of occurred. As I suid before, he was transferred to a freight engine, but even there he was timid and finally left the road altogether. "You can put it down as a pretty least regard for her character must be in her house by sundown. Only think of the long, dull winter afternoons and evenings when no friend can come near them, as all their female friends must be in their own houses, and male friends they cannot have. Even the men of their own family associate but little with them. Let us hope that with the increase of intercourse between Europeans and Turks the life of the women must change and that as the men have dropped their oriental garb the women Oil, the sovereign cure for croup and will in time part with the yashmak and all other throat or lung diseases. ferejeh, and that with them their isolated lives will cease. Young Turks who have been educated in Berlin, Paris and Vienna before they marry have been frequently advise change of air and heard to declare that their wives shall be free, and yet when it comes to the point they have all yielded to the tyranny of custom. Nor is there any chance of change during the reign of Abdul Hamid, whose views on the seclusion of women are very strict, scarcely a year passing without fresh laws on ferejehs.

The Practice of Law.

"There's no more fun in the practice of law," observed the Judge, as he softly brushed away the film of soft ashes from the live end of his eigar. "Thirty years ago, when we used to impeach all the witnesses on the other side and have two or three fights every noon Apples dried, h

Diver's Dangers.

The greatest danger to those who live into the sea for valuables that have been sunk is that of falling asleep. On a hot day the contrast between the heat above and the delicious coolness below water is apt to make a diver sleepy. One of these men recently stated that he once slept half an hour at the bottom of a wreck where he was Supposing that had happened in a channel where the tide runs so swiftly that a diver can work only during the one hour of slack water, the deadly rush of tide would have snapped the lifeline and hose. Then in working wrecks there is danger of getting lammed in between freight, or getting the hose or line entangled. When the hose snaps at a great depth the tremendors pressure kills the diver. An English journal tells a story to illustrate the obstinacy of Sir Redvers Buller. During the last Nile campaign, when descending through one of the cataracts on board a river steamer, he got into a discussion with Lord Charles J. B. HOLDERBAUM, Beresford as to the proper channel that should be taken. Each obstinately defended his own course, but in the end that which Buller insisted upon was adopted, and the steamer got through without accident. "You see I was right!" cried Sir Redvers. "Mine was the proper channel." "That was mine, too," coolly replied Lord Charles. "I Brass pins were first made in New knew you would go against whatever only recommended the other because I
