BILL GETS INTO TROUBLE.

I've got a letter, parson, from my son away out West. An' my ol' heart is heavy as an anvil in my breast. To think the boy whose father I had once so proudly planned should wander from the path o' right an' come to such an end!

I told him when he left as only three don't know the way to the West. He'd find himself a pho-win, in a mighty crooked row—

He'd miss his father's counsel, an' his mother's prayers, too. But he said the firm was hateful, an' he guessed he'd have to go.

I know that's big temptation for a youngster in the West. But I believed our Billy had the courage to resist. An' when he left I warned him o' the ever-widening snares.

That the life hid in the shadows in life's pathway everywhere. But Bill he promised faithful he'd be loyal, an' an' allowed.

He'd build a reputation that'd make us mighty proud. But it seems as how my counsel sort o' faded from his mind. An' now the boy's in trouble of the very worst kind!

His letters came so seldom that I somehow sort o' knowed. That Billy was a-trampin' on a mighty rocky road.

But never once imagined he would bow his head in shame. An' in the dust he'd waller his ol' daddy's honored name.

He writes from out in Denver, an' the story's mighty short. I just can't tell his mother; I'll crush her poor of heart!

An' so I reckoned, parson, you might break the news to her—

Bill's in the "Lodge," but he doesn't say what fir.

JUDGING IN HASTE.

Mr. Ralph Sunfold was smoking his cigar before the kitchen fire. He always went into the kitchen to smoke his cigar of a winter evening. He said it was to save the snowy muffs in his coat, but in her secret heart Aunt Phreda believed it was to enjoy the light and warmth of the huge open fire.

And really, Aunt Phreda's kitchen was a cozy and more comfortable place than some parlors, with its red and black striped rag carpet, its tall clock in the corner, the yellow-washed walls all festooned with shining tin, and the cushioned chair in the corner.

He was smoking his cigar, as we said before, and Aunt Phreda was industriously picking yellow leaves off the big green geranium in the window.

"Yes," said Aunt Phreda, "she's coming back, or she wouldn't have sent her trunk."

"No," said Mr. Sunfold, "I suppose not."

"And I am heartily sorry," added Aunt Phreda.

Mr. Sunfold knocked the ashes off the tip of his cigar, replaced on the fire-dogs a log which had rolled off, and then asked in a rather a low tone: "Why?"

"Because you are determined to marry her," said Aunt Phreda.

Aunt Phreda wheeled around to face her nephew.

"Because she's a heartless little flirt," said she. "And I'm sorry I ever allowed her and brought her here to break the hearts of half the young men in the county."

Mr. Sunfold laughed.

"Let them take care of their own hearts," said he. "That's no business of mine. She loves me, and me only, and that is enough."

"I'm not so sure of that," said Aunt Phreda, with a spice of feminine malice. "She's a regular coquet, Elsie Bennett is, and she may jilt you as well as another."

"In that, Aunt Phreda," said the young man, slowly, "I am sure that you are mistaken. I know Elsie from Elsie. I know she has passed a last name, but no one knew what it was, and he was universally known as 'Simon.'"

"I've made a mistake," said this individual, taking off the felt hat to scratch his head. "I left young Squire Harrison's trunk here this morning, and sent the young lady's to Harrison Hall. Here it is in the wagon, if you'll just hand a hand, mister, to get it out."

"My trunk at Harrison Hall?" cried Elsie.

"Squire Harrison's trunk here?" fairly shrieked Aunt Phreda. "Then that is not your trunk, and the cap, and the smoking jacket, and the—And oh, goodness! Ralph!" clutched nervously at her nephew's sleeve, "we've been broken into and a strange man's trunk. Do you suppose they'll arrest you for larceny?"

But Mr. Sunfold only laughed—his heart was so light that he could have laughed at anything now—and as he hoped old Simon being the pretty little zinc-covered trunk in, he glanced merrily at his aunt.

"I don't believe we shall find any contraband goods here, Aunt Phreda," said he.

"What are you talking about?" said Elsie.

And while Aunt Phreda was getting the trunk to the little school m'um an' all about it.

OLD NEWSPAPERS.

Some Extracts That May be Interesting, With Comments by a Correspondent.

EDITOR HERALD:

Some time ago there were placed in the writer's hands many numbers of the "Somerset Whig," which, so far as is now known, was probably the first English newspaper to be published in the town of Somerset. These ancient newspapers date back to the years 1818, '19 and '20, and were presented by the late Adam Lepley, of Southampton township, who was a subscriber to the paper in those early days.

In those days but little attention was paid to local news, and we venture to say that many single issues of our present county papers contain more pieces of local happenings than are to be found in a dozen of these early numbers of the "Whig." Yet a perusal of these old papers shows that they make mention of a good many things and events that are really a part of our local history. In some instances a faint recollection of the events of the past is preserved in the memory of the older people, who may have heard them spoken of in the days of their youth; the others have long since been forgotten.

We herewith submit to you for publication in the HERALD some of these early happenings that are recorded in these papers, believing that some of them, at least, will be read with interest by the present generation.

From an advertisement we learn that on 3d of February, 1818, His Excellency, the Governor of Pennsylvania, incorporated the Somerset and Bedford Turnpike Company, which company was to construct a turnpike road to lead from Somerset to a point on the Harrisburg and Pittsburgh road, and was to be there given to the subscribers to the stock of the company to meet at the house of Joseph Pilsen, innkeeper, on the Glade road, in Allegheny township, on the 20th of March, 1818, for the purpose of organizing the said company. The Commissioners giving the notice were: Jacob Stoner, Wm. C. Dorsey, Jas. M. Russell, David Mann, Jacob Bonnett, Samuel Riddle, Robert Philson, Jacob Schmeider and Henry Ankeny.

Archibald Elliot, a way-faring man, 38 years old, advertised there turn of a lost pocketbook containing $25.00.

Peter Rhoads offers for sale his home farm of 300 acres in Stonycreek township, on which is a grist mill with three pairs of stones; and also a saw mill, said to be the best in the county.

Jonas Ebert and Michael Hay, executors of Henry Shaver, deceased, offer for his tavern stand and farm on the Great Road, 8 miles still lying in the town of Somerset, containing 150 acres.

Another grist mill and saw mill, on the waters of Middlecreek, is offered for sale by Jacob Cregley. (This mill in earlier days was known as King's Mill.)

Benjamin Landis offers for sale 158 acres of land in Quasamoking, which is in such a high state of cultivation that there were raised the past season from 15 acres of land 27 bushels of well cleaned clover seed.

John Kurz announces that he has bought Mr. Goe's medicine establishment, or drug store.

The annual settlement of Somerset county for 1817, also appears in this issue. From it we learn that Abraham Gordon was assessed $21.00; Comanagh, $109.61; Quasamoking, $287.59; Jenner, $53.44.
