It is a pity that the efforts spent by friends of criminals in shielding them from the penalty of their deeds could not be spent earlier on prevention of such deeds. This particular energy of ing of the workings of justice, and, while one can not reasonably blame demanding serious attention.

THE gold Democrats and silver Democrats are throwing stones at each other again. Mr. Bryan has come to the front with a sarcastic reply to Mr. Cleveland's Reform Club speech, in which he says that Cleveland and his wing of the Democracy are "long on platitudes and short on performances," and that they reach their "maximum at a banquet and their minimum at the polls."

ONE of the ridiculous claims against the McKinley law is that it reduced the revenues of the Government. It was passed for that purpose. The surplus under the old law had exceeded to add one vote to the Rep tects American productions. What the Democrats want is to make trouble.

IT was 18 months after Grover Cleveland became president before the Wilson tariff bill was a law, but there is good reason to believe that the Dingthat time has not yet passed. Until the bill can pass and the country has time to absorb the enormous mass of goods now being rushed in by the foreign importers, it is unreasonable to expect a resumption of activity by the manufacturers or consequent prosperity among the masses will be affected by that activity.

Ex-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND must have been so busy defending himself against the attacks during the late campaign that he failed to get time to read the platform of the Republican party. He evidently does not understand that its strongest pledges were a restoration of protection, the maintenance of the present safe standard of our currency and the promotion of international bimetallism. The burden of his New York speech the other night was an attack upon the party for carrying out these pledges which were endorsed by a much larger majority of the voters of the nation than he ever received in any of his three candidacies for the presidency.

THE universal impression in Europe appears to be that the war between Greece and Turkey is over and nothing remains to be done but the arrangment of the terms of peace. Very much the same opinion seems to prevail in this country. Were the time pashed back a hundred years, it avenue, Pittsburgh, you get the skill of might be possible for Greece to prolong the struggle until some of her neighbors were drawn into it, but modern wars, at least wars at this end of the century, require ready money for their conduct, and the cash of Greece is exhausted. There must be money to run and repair railroads, buy ordnance stores, build bridges and purchase provisions. Greece has no credit, and unless she bad a large surplus of stores, she must have money to buy them. The Greek campaign, therefore, promises to collapse if, for no other reason, because the exchequer is

The Result in Kentucky.

Kentucky will again be represented by friendship is becoming a serious block- two senators in the Senate of the United | parties. States after an unprecedented contest, which ran through one regular and one the efforts, their successful results are special session of the legislature, and was marked by the calling out of the State troops to preserve order and prevent bloodshed. There will be a general feeling of relief that this disgraceful and annecessary deadlock, which has been characterized by more scandal and factional bitterness than any recent senatorial contest, is ended at last. The Republicans had a clear majority of the legis lature, were clearly entitled to the senator, and should have elected one on the first joint ballot of the special session. That the contest was prolonged beyond a single ballot was entirely due to the factional and personal differences among the Republicans themselves, who, for the first time in the history of the party, conrolled the legislature, and should have been harmonious in their action. The result of Deboe's election will be

Old Enough to Vote.

The scientific chaps who figure ou such things for the benefit of the rest of us poor mortals tell us that the animal known as the sheep lives to an age of ten years, says the Johnstown Tribune. But they have probably not heard of a ewe in the possession of Mr. Eli Gashaw, a farmer of Jenner Township, Somersel County, else they would revise their estimate. The venerable and distinguished animal in question has had the floeces of twenty-one winters removed from its back, and would be old enough to vote at the Republican primaries this spring it she had the other qualifications.

Mr. Gashaw raised the ewe from lambkin, and is consequently sure of her age. Aside from her other distinctions, she has a numerous and respectable progeny, having given birth to a lamb every spring from the time she She is of no particular breed, but desigstock," Old age has not dimmed her evesight, and she can tell a thistle from a bunch of clover as well as ever she could.
