All In the Family.

A few nights ago a prominent Evansonian, who lives in a handsome home in Lake street, was working overtime on the North Side, and when his business was completed boarded a North Shere electric car for home. He was enjoying the last of his box of Havanas and was contemplating how much the next box would cost when the conductor came out on the front platform for fares. The thoughtful man jammed his hands into his pockets, and in his dismay discovered that he had only a counterfeit dollar, which he had been carrying for months. Ten miles from home, away from friends and broke was the unpleasant thought that flashed through his mind, so he passed up the counterfeit coin and received his change. Recognized by His Legs. When Archbishop Tait was visiting at a country house in the Highlands of Scotland, some years ago, he went down one morning to the postoffice to send a elegram to his brother, Sheriff Tait, and he wrote the direction, "The archbishop of Canterbury to Sheriff Tait." The old postmaster read the words in contemptuous tones, and then, looking at him over his spectacles, said: "The archbishop of Canterbury! And wha may ye be that takes this cognomen?" The archbishop, with a homely woolen comforter wound about his neck to keep out the chill air, was painfully conscious that he might find it hard to prove his identity. It was a relief to him when on second thoughts the postmaster relented so far as to inquire, 'May be ye're the gentleman himself?" Tait replied, "For want of a better, I am." The old Scot saw the mistake into which he had fallen and was profuse in his apologies. "I might have seen you were rather consequential about the legs." Then, in order to send the archbishop away in good heart, he added, "I have a son in London, a lad in a shop and he gaed to hear ye preach one day and was verra weel satisfied."-Pittsburg Dispatch.
