A BABY UNBORN ITSELF.

I wish I wasn't pretty and I wish I wasn't smart.

I wish that great big grow-up folks weren't smart enough to take advantage of a little, twenty-five cent, and make Life a burden to a baby, poisoning on it, one and all, in a way they wouldn't dare to if it wasn't weak and small.

I guess, if you were me, that you'd be mad—As Moses-if each woman poked a finger in your cheek.

And said, "So pitty 'n' sing!" and all but double in my list.

Away with her hard bugging, while she kisses you most to death.

They call me "little angel" but an angel would be your mate, and an angel's disposition would be spoiled;

Yet those folk feel they all wonder why I double in my list.

And with angry looks bombard them every time that I am kissed.

I'm the baby that's abused, and I just think it is shame.

The busy, big society that's got the great, long name—

What is it that they call it, now—the S. F. P. Can't keep those cruel women from over kissing me!

Mary Norton Bradford.

HE SAVED THE SHIP.

"That's rather a purty story, that of Huff's. The journal the other day about how he brought the Sibery through a gale in 1883," remarked

Engineer Blowitz to some boat companions who had gathered in the engine room of the famous old side wheeler Exile, a forty-runner," built as a palatial passenger boat and later winning fame as a grain carrier. "I happened to be at Eagle harbor, on Michigan Island, when he brought the Sibery into port and can't say but what Huff has played it purty nosedlike in telling the yarn. He give it straight, though, berrin his leavin' out a few things which maybe he didn't think important, though some of 'em was to the owners. "I happened to be at Eagle harbor, on Michigan Island, when he brought the Sibery into port and can't say but what Huff has played it purty nosedlike in telling the yarn. Useful Hints.

In "fly days" the ironing should be protected by a mosquito netting.

Clothing often gathers some dampness in summer while lying in the drawers, even when it is put away dry.

Before it is used it should be shaken or drawn and hung in a sunny window for at least a quarter of an hour to air.

To Wash a Sheepskin Mat.—The first thing to be remembered is that it should not be washed in hot water, as that would spoil the color of the wool and make it quite yellow.

Boiled soap must be used in sufficient quantity to clean the skin well, after which it must be thoroughly rinsed in cold water until the whole of the soap is removed.

It should now be put in to water with blue in it, of which enough should be used to make it clear white. The mat should be put in the sun to dry, but care must be taken not to leave it too long, or to put the skin uppermost, but always the fleecy part, otherwise it will become stiff and will crack.

To Clean White Straw Hats.—Make a paste of powdered sulphur and cold water, or of soap and water, and cover with the paste till you do not see the straw; rub hard; hang the hat up to dry; when dry, brush the sulphur off with a brush till the straw gets beautifully white. This method is easier than the sulphur bleaching-bath, and can be done quickly.

Marking Ink or Iron Moulds may be removed by placing a plate on the top of a basin of boiling water, then spread the articles on the plate, with the spot with boiling water, and rub it with a small quantity of suds of lard; as the article dries the stain will disappear. If the first fails, repeat the application.

Blackening for Harness.—Melt two ounces of nutmeg salt with six ounces of beeswax, add six ounces of sugar candy, or one of soap, and dissolve in water, and one ounce of indigo finely powdered; when melted and well mixed add a gill of turpentine; lay it on the harness with a sponge, and polish off with a brush.

Writing rendered illegible by age may be restored by moistening it by means of a feather with an infusion of galls, or a solution of prussiate of potash slightly acidulated with muriatic acid, observing to apply the liquid as to prevent the ink from spreading.

Britannia metal spoons should be rubbed with sweet oil on flame, then polished with rottenstone, and next washed with soap and hot water and finished with wax leather and whitening powder.

Paint or grease spots may be removed from wood cloth by turpentine being rubbed on.

Married to Help His Dog. In the North of England, where rabbit-raising is most in vogue, swill, well treated does often win large sums of prizes. It is therefore little to be wondered at that the owners of these animals should bestow so much upon them.

An old Yorkshire collier, well known for his success in the coursing field has recently surprised all his mates by pulling a very surprising number of pounds guaranteeing himself a pleasant business makes bad travel, cross words. These, too, are disturbing to the cook, and she sends bad food to the table.

The man can't eat it, and his business goes wrong all day. A jealous, bilious woman is a bad mother. She upsets the children, and money has to be paid out for medicine for them.

Business or business jealousy kills. The woman who whispers a convenient detrimental word about an associate into the ear of her patron or employer may benefit for a day. In the end, he concludes that she is untrustworthy.

Under Restriction. The sour and surly looking visitor called the little boy to him and took him on his knee. It so happened that at this particular time he wished to make friends with him in order to stand well with his parents.

"I like little boys," said the visitor. The boy looked as if he doubted it, but held his peace.

"That is," explained the visitor, in order that there should be no mistake, "I like good little boys, and you're a good little boy, aren't you?"

"Well," returned the boy cautiously, "there are a lot worse than me out our street."

"I want that you should like me, too," persisted the visitor.

Again the boy was wise enough to hold his peace, but he looked as if he thought the job was a pretty big one. The expression was not lost on the visitor.

"Don't you like me now?" he asked. The boy looked at the visitor and sighed. Then he looked at his father, and his expression was one of great doubt.

"Pop," he said at last, "does all that stuff that you told me about never telling a lie go too?"

The meeting was promptly adjourned amid considerable confusion.—Chicago Post.

Something to Know. It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bites. This medicine is purely vegetable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centres in the stomach, gently stimulates the liver and kidneys, and aids those organs in throwing off impurities in the blood.

Electric Bites improves the appetite, aids digestion, and is pronounced by those that have tried it as the very best food for purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. Sold for 50c or $1.00 per bottle at Snyder's drug store, Somerset, or at Bralier's drug store, Berlin.
