

WOMAN'S WORLD.

AN INTERESTING VISITOR WHO COMES FROM PITCAIRN ISLAND.

Woman's Interest in Education—Privileges of the Club—Notable Women and Women Suffrage—A Caution to Wheelwrights—Two Southern Women.

Miss Rowland Amelia Young, a direct descendant of that most historically famous party of "beauty rustlers" who settled on Pitcairn Island, in the city, a guest at the residence of Miss Mindra Berry, on Van Ness avenue. Miss Young is a pleasant, bright and intelligent young woman, simple, earnest and unpretentious in manner. She was introduced to the club by her father, who was a teacher there. She remained to assist in the duties of the club during the absence of her father. In speaking of her education she said: "You ask me where I was educated. In your acceptance of the requirements of education I cannot claim to have a 'I simply can read and write.'"

Yet this woman from the faraway isle, whose advance in letters has been principally through self-culture, has written a volume, "Story of the Pitcairn Island"—which has gone through its third edition. She speaks English well and correctly.

Miss Young has regular features, a rich olive complexion, with a slight flush of color at times playing in her cheeks. Her eyes are dark, and her black hair is streaked with silver. She has passed her life, with the exception of seven years of childhood spent on Norfolk Island, in the quiet of the island.

AN AMERICAN BEAUTY.

A Washington Girl Who Now Hangs as One of Britain's Handsomest Women.

Some Londoners remarked recently that the handsomest woman who would go down to history in the British book of beauty would be American, and their words are declared to be true. Lady Grey Egerton would probably be of the palm.

This lovely American spent much of her time during the last season in London in posing for a portrait, a copy of which has now been made for the volume containing all the noted British beauties of the Victorian era. The painting was executed by Percy Anderson, whose portrait of the Princess of Wales has already become famous. Lady Egerton's portrait now hangs in the National gallery among the masterpieces of Romney, Reynolds and Lely. The picture shows her in a pose similar to that shown in the reproduction given here.

Unlike many great beauties, she has the good fortune to take an excellent photograph, but no colored counterfoil could convey the richness of a complexion dark, but exquisitely clear and fair, her wondrous lights and shadows looking in her eyes and hair.

When the old man's boy used to get a baseball lodged in a gutter at the frequent use of the road in winter quarters—never used to get out at the scuttie and climb down the roof and take the risk of falling off, and breaking his neck to get it. He used to go to the barn and get out the giraffe. The old horse would trot along after the boy—he knew that he was worth a dollar and a half.

THE TABLE D'ORATEUR.

The table d'orateur, which all winter has held its court in the feather fairness is now filled by the smart woman with wild flowers. It takes a good deal of trouble to keep them damp and fresh, but when once they are set in the table is cleared the plant, in its own season, is lifted from the rim and set back in cool surroundings. One fortunate woman who can grow any thing "kept her 'table garden' shut up in a wash boiler in the cool, dark cellar.—Exchange.

Not to Be Deceived.

The president of one of the leading colleges was recently journeying toward New York and found himself in the same seat with an old man whose general appearance betokened the farmer. They soon fell into conversation, and after saying that he was on his first visit to the metropolis the farmer mentioned the name of the village up among the hills of New Hampshire from which he was a native.

CORONATION SERVICES.

Turnout of Lord on Condition of Personal Duty to the Sovereign.

Flourace Hayward recites Queen Victoria's coronation in The Century. The writer says: "The coronation was a most interesting event, and the turnout of Lord on condition of personal duty to the sovereign was a most interesting event."

One was that the Duke of Norfolk, who claimed "the right to find for the queen on her day of coronation a glove for her majesty's right arm and to support the queen's right hand on the same day as long as her majesty shall hold in her hand the royal scepter, the petitioner holding the master of Workop by the forehead service." In other words, the Duke of Norfolk failed to provide the glove or support her majesty's arm at that particular time his ownership of Workop manor would have been invalidated and the property have reverted to the crown.

Another petition was that of Barbara, Baroness Grey de Ruthyn, who, as the head of her family, claimed the right to carry the great sword of her majesty on the day of her coronation and asked that George, Lord Byron, be appointed her deputy for the performance of that duty.

Another petition was that of Francis, twelfth earl of Huntingdon. The earl of Huntingdon had remained suspended for many years owing to the tenth earl dying without issue. When, however, he died, his son succeeded in establishing, as a descendant of the second earl, his right to the peerage, he also claimed the right to carry one of the four swords of state in the coronation procession, this sword as well as other duties and services connected with the ceremony, being the condition of his tenure of lands. Small consideration, that in announcing the omission of the procession it was important to set forth also that the non-performance of duties connected with it should entail no forfeitures.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

RIDING A SEA MONSTER.

How Florida Boys Catch Turtles For the Market—It Is a Great Sport.

Florida boys have one kind of exciting sport which the young folk of most northern lands know little about. It consists in catching the huge sea turtles which frequent the bays along the southern coast of Florida. The turtles, from which is made the green turtle soup so familiar to restaurant fare, are confined by the fishermen in huge pens, or "turtle enclosures" consisting of fences extending from the shore out into the water. When the fishermen wants a great turtle for market, one of the boys, whose brown hair is striped blue, stands in the prow of the boat as it is pushed from the shore. He watches the turtles taking a nap on the clear white sand of the bottom. He dives quickly, and swimming down from behind, seizes the turtle firmly by its shell. Of course the turtle wakes up, and, like a bucking broncho, begins to dash and plunge wildly about, seeking to throw its plucky rider.

Not seeming to mind, it darts quickly to the surface, where the boy gets his first breath. Then down again it goes, tearing through the water and beating the foam with its flippers. But the rider never lets go for a moment, and presently the great turtle grows exhausted, and the boy, by lifting on the front end of the shell forces it to the boat, where it is quickly hoisted and taken away to market. It is great sport and the boys enjoy it as much as our Chicago like a lively young pony ride.—Chicago Record.

THE GAME OF EGOTISM.

The following game is offered by the London department of Every Where. It is founded upon the frequent use of the first personal pronoun in the conversation of almost every one whom we meet. Others, of course, put into their talk a large number of nouns and adjectives and are noted for the fact, but everybody uses it more than he thinks he does until confronted with a record.
