cotton fire in the lower part of New York some years ago had its comic side and was the means of the firemen discovering the main body of the fire, which for some time they had been endeavering in vain to locate.

The smoke was pouring out of nearly every part of the building, and although everal entrances had been made it had been impossible to find the sent of the fire. The chief in charge ordered some windows on the third floor to be 'opened up," and a ladder was accordingly raised and a fireman ascended. With the aid of a hook he pried open the iron shutters, and, lamp in hand, stepped in-and disappeared. His com-panion upon the ladder, wondering why no had so suddenly vanished from sight, secred in, and found that he had stepped into the elevator shaft that was directly under this window and had fallen through to the basement. Hastily deending, he alarmed the others, and, foreing an entrance, they made their way to the cellar. Here they found their comrade in a sitting position upon a bale of cotton, partly stunned and dazed from the shock of the fall, but otherwise uninjured. In his hand he still held the wire handle of his lamp-all that remained of it-while in front of him, farther in the basement, blazing merrily, was the fire they had been en deavering to find. His fall had led him directly to it. On atterward examining the hatchway, or shaft, through which he had fallen, they found that it had bars running diagonally across at each floor, and in some marvelous way he had escaped each one in his downward flight. - Charles T. Hill in St. Nicholas.

British and American Business Integrity, It is in trade especially that the superiority of British honesty is averred to show itself. The British are the greatest traders on earth and have been traders long enough and extensively enough to have learned what standards of commercial honesty pay best in the long run. An American who had traveled in southwestern Europe, in South America and other parts of the world that are somewhat out of the beaten path lately admitted to the present writer that in the countries he had visited the reputation of Americans seemed to him to be low and that of the British very high. In Buenes Ayres, he said, an English merchant's word inspired confidence, but an American merchant's assurances were received with a good deal of skepticism. This sort of testimony is mortifying to American ears; but, if we believe it, we must look for the remedy to spring not from moral reform, but simply from increased-knowledge. We expect those who bring this repreach upon us to learn, from information and reflection if possible, but if necessary from experience, that, though an individual regue may steal or cheat and escape punishment, for a people who can neither hide nor run away from the consequences of their acts honesty is the most sagacious and remunerative course. -- Scribner's.

She is proud of the blood of Bunker Hill heroes, which, she says, is in her veins. The best man, who sat beside the prettiest bridesmaid, is also a Britisher. Two of the ushers were from fair Albion. So what could be more natural than, after drinking the health of the bride and the bridegroom and the bridesmaids and every one else closely or remotely associated with the festive occasion whom any one could think of that the bridegroom should say to his fair young wife, "Now, Marguerite, say, 'God bless the queen.'" Immediately a trio of manly voices seconded the motion and glasses were raised to drink to the queen. The bride, sweet and meek and submissive looking as a white rose, only smiled. "To the health of the queen," repeated the bridegroom. "Say it, my dear." "To the health of us all," said the bride, with a childlike smile. "No, that isn't it. Say 'to the queen,' " repeated the bold Briton. "You have promised to honor and obey, you know." But the little American bride only smiled and shook her head in its Victoria poke bonnet and said, in a voice as gentle as a summer breeze, "No, I Apples won't say it." Women Voters In New Zealand. In the general election which was held simultaneously with the liquer election the influence of women voters was felt comparatively little, they going in the main with the men. The government of Mr. Sedden was fiercely attacked because of its financial policy; because it was said to foment class interests and enmities; because it subsidized the press and increased taxation. But the government could undoubtedly show that it had carried into law several farreaching measures for the improvement of the lot of the workers, and the electors returned it with a majority of about Writing of the woman's vote in this election, Sir Robert Stout says in the Australian Review of Reviews: "It cannot be said that purity of administration or the character of the candidates loomed larger in the eyes of women than in those of men. The prediction that party zeal and partisan feeling would not blind them to the defects of the character of candidates has not been fulfilled. A few members have been returned to the house whose character for sobriety does not stand high, and women were found supporting them just as much as men. It cannot be said that women were any different in their voting from their husbands and brothers. They were carried away just as much by party eries as the men were, and the party dominated them."-Lon-

Double Skirted Effects. History repeats itself perhaps oftener in the matter of dress than in any other respect. Years ago the fashion of ar ranging trimming on the dress skirt to simulate an overdress was merely the stepping stone to the actual overskirt that soon followed. And now confusion is worse confounded by mixing the antique and modern in present modes with double skirted effects. We have the overskirt hinted at by outlines of ruffles, braids and all the new trimmings, and even the bustle is favorably looked upon by many. Whether this all means a return to the heavy draperies, steels in the backs of skirts and huge

With the close of the Presidential campaign THE TEIBUNE recognizes the fact that the American people are now anxious to give their attention to home and business interests. To meet this condition, politics will have far less space and prominence, until another State or National occasion demands a renewal of the fight for the principles for which THE TRIBUNE has labored
