As an illustration, every Republican voter in the county remembers with what audacity and vehemence the "fake" leaders declared a primary election would be held without the consent of the Chairman; how their organ hysterically proclaimed in glaring headlines that a primary would be held, and how a bogus call signed by a number of committeemen finally appeared in it stating that a primary would be held, and that tickets would be forwarded to all of the election districts. When the matter got into court minent counsel had the effrontry to take the position that the "fake" primary was held in response to a call issued by Chairman Berkley and was therefore legal. It is a matter of grave doubt whether the counsel who argued so earn

L. Pugh, Esq., averred that he had paid other years. J. A. Berkey, Chairman of the "fake" ounty committee, testified that he had aused the names of the fifteen candidates to be announced in the columns of the "fake" organ, that he had had 'fake" tickets printed and distributed on his own authority. All of the testimony was in when court adjourned at noon Saturday. At the afternoon session F. J. Kooser argued in thirty minutes. The gist of his argument was that Chairman Berkley had acted in an arbitrary manner, had labored to deeive candidates who were anxious to ancall a primary election, which he had no wide circle of friends, and throughout power to cancel. Mr. Holbert followed for his clients, abmitting a number of points and quoting authorities to sustain them. He laid particular stress upon role 13, which empowers the Chairman to assess caudidates for nomination, and upon the rule requiring the tickets and blanks to be farnished by the Chairman, and the additional rule which requires returns to be made to the Chairman, as well as several

Hon, A. J. Colborn made a telling argument in behalf of sustaining the certificates of Messrs. Shoemaker and Coleman, and paid his respects to the leaders of the "fake" primary who for the past twenty years have been engaged in sowing discord in the ranks of the Republican party. Edward B. Scull argued that the reme dy of the "fakirs" before they set up an organization for themselves was in court, where a mandamus could have been se cured compelling the Chairman to announce the names of the "fake" candidates and place their names upon the tickets providing they had complied with the party rules. He also argued in behalf of rule 13 and insisted that because the rule had not been called into requisition and enforced in other years was no reason why it should not be sustained and enforced at this time. He also took the view that the certificate of Shoemaker and Coleman was regular and in conformity with the act of Assembly empowering the officers of political parties to certify nominations where there are no opposing candidates. The argument in behalf of Messre Shoemaker and Coleman was closed by L. C. Colborn, Esq., who presented the rules governing the Republican party in he light of the interpretation placed upon them by Chairman Berkley and upon which his clients hope to have their certificate of nomination sustained, stopped by an officer. They bought a dress and taking advantage of his oppordress and taking advantage of his oppor-tunity viciously assailed gentlemen business. From the tenor of the General's remarks it was clear that he still labors under the delusion that the party he organized and led in 1882 is the Republican party of Somerset county. He was unable to cite any authorities showing that he was in the right at that time or that his clients have any reason to expect that their names will appear in the Republican column on the ballot to be voted in November next. Judge Barker directed the court stenographer to transcribe certain portions of the testimony at an early day and took the papers in the case with him to Ebensburg. It is not known when the Court will hand down an opinion.
