New York Man Makes A Startling Propesition to Heirs.

The proposition is both an interesting and Peter Baker. On Tuesday, December | it without cost. 21, a stranger entered the office of Attorney W. J. Jordan, Grant Street, and asked him if he was attorney for the Baker heirs. Mr. Jordan said that he had represented a branch of the family in 1889, when he searched the records of Philadelphia county, but could locate none of the $380,000,000 worth of property said to have been leased for ninety-nine years. He so reported to the persons who engaged him, and told the stranger that he took no stock in any Baker estate.

"Weil, that is neither here nor there," said the stranger. "I wrote to the Commercial Gazette for the names of the attorneys connected with this estate, or alleged estate as you call it, and your name was mentioned as among them. Now,

"Since you are retained, of course, you are sworn to secreey concerning your client's affairs. I have no objection to you stating the facts, but my name, business and address must not be divulged until the Baker heirs agree to this proposi-

"I have journeyed to this city to place this proposition before the Baker heirs, as I learned that the association's headquarters were here. Nearly 100 years ago my great grandmother was the mistres of one Jacob Baker, in Holland. Jacob Baker had a brother named Peter. The latter was married and had two children. Both had been in America a number of years and served with distinction in the lonial wars. They secured some little roperty and determined to return to Holand. Before returning both signed a ninety-nine year lease in German for a parcel of land containing 614 acres, at ar annual rental of £18, English money, to one Martin Yulas. This lease was dated April 11, 1780. The lease was not on rec ord, but retained by the brothers. EXTENT OF THE PROPERTY. "These brothers obtained this property by purchase and government grant, Jasob bought 416 acres, and the deed for the same, which I have with me, is dated November 12, 1778. It is located on the Germantown road, six miles from the Delaware river, or now in a valuable portion of Philadelphia. The government grant was for 200 acres, made out to Peter Baker, making 616 acres, all told. Two acres were taken off this for a cemetery, which is still used for burial purposes by a certain institution. The lease, you see, was for 614 acres. Neither the deed nor the grant was recorded, quite a common thing in those days, for people liked to keep their own deeds. To-day you will find deeds unrecorded in Philadelphia and other cities, and especially in country

"After leasing the land to Yalas, the rothers sailed for Holland, to spend the emainder of their lives. Jacob met my great - grandmother and she lived with him for a long time. He had the papers with him for safe-keeping, not wanting them on record here when he was in Holland-a kind of fear foreigners always have, most of them keeping their valuables in their trunks or house, preferably to banks.

"Before Jacob Baker died he gave the hree papers to my great-grandmother, and she in turn gave them to my grandmother, who brought them to this country. My mother secured them and the tory and I have them now. They alone can help the Baker heirs. Now, if I was offered $50,000 to-morrow for these papers would refuse it, because I expect to get nore money for them. I want a share, and unless I get it they will not get the
