THE GLORIOUS BEYOND.

Why are the things I have so mean, Compared with those I can not get? Why may I never sit serene, Why must I ever plan and fret?

Why are the various worldly sights That lie before me every day Inferior to mountain heights And tombs and castles far away ?

Why are the things I long to do The ones from which I must refrain? Why is the path I'd fain pursue The winding one that leads to pain?

Why is the maiden that I neter May hope to press unto my breast The very fairest of the fair, And lovelier than all the rest?

The richest mines are far away, And sweet contentment's on ahead ; E'en now I hear the preacher say I can't be happy till I'm dead.

Ab, yes! But when my spirit flies To heaven, shail I be happy there-Or will there be beyond theskies Still some more glories Otherwhere? S. E. Kiser, in Cleveland Leader.
