Vice Director Glazier of the Oklahoma Experiment Station, says : As to time and manner of grape pruning, there is no little discussion among viticulturists. We think there should be a departure from the old beaten paths of our Northern neighbors. In this latitude we can safely prune our vines in early fall, without fear of the winter destroying our remaining eanes. The objector urges that the fall-pruned vines will force their bods out earlier in the spring than vines pruned, say, in more than ten pounds-11-12-13-14! February. We are quite sure that this error is misleading, as evidenced by the fact that grapes will put forth buds, and bloom as well, without root action. Again, if pruning is left until late spring, a large reserve force is lost and cast away by the nee-Hess canes. Vineyards occupying a proper altitude are not often expose 1 to late frosts. We believe that the safer course to pursue is to prune in the fall, thereby conserving all food material for the year's crop.
