When gattering devels on a train, a good-natured conductor noticed a passen-ger fumbling and fussing in every pocket for his ticket, which he apparently held unconsciously between his teeth. En-joying the embarrnssment of the traveler along with some fellow passengers in the adjucent scats, he finally, much to the adjucent scats, he finally, much to the Umbrellas, Ladies' and Children's adjacent seats, he many, made of the astonishment of the gentleman, reached forth his hand, took the ticket, looked at it, punched it, smiled, then proceeded down the siske to the next car. When he closed the door a passenger, who had enjoyed the situation, said to the late holder of the ticket, "A pretty fair sam-che of absent mindedness, she?"
