Some People too Modest to Contide in their Physician-A Woman Cured of a Serious Disease by a Certain Method, the Only Drawback of which was, it "Made Her Too Fat."

The doctor came in haste and found his patient again in great agony from a splitting homeache. It was his fifth call on the same patient, and cach time to treat the same patient, and cach time to treat the same patient, and cach time to treat the same proble. With a suspicion that his diagnossis was incorrect and that he was treating a gymptom and not the disease, he said to her: "Madam, it is useless for me to visit you again. You are keeping from me facts and symptoms which it is necessary i should know. The patient finally asknowledge that, through a false modesty, she had not fold him all. Then she told how she had suffered from female weakness but lind kept it from him—too modet to speak. The old docsor was disgusted at such prudistaness, but when he knew the facts, cured her easily and quickly.

The following case differs from the above, only in the fact that the patient is not afraid to speak and to "call a spade a spade."

Words fail to describe the suffering I scalered before I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and the said and the said to speak and to "call a spade a spade."

Made by Indian Women. Some beautiful straw braid or straw lace exhibited in New York may become very popular for hat trimming. It is made by Indian women who have been taught by the French sisters of charity. The straw is sometimes of the ordinary kind, split by a sharp knife into pieces no thicker than a cord or thread. Some-times in place of the straw vines and other vegetable forms are employed, which can be cut in the same manner. but which are soft and pliable, while straw is not. These are worked into lace patterns intermediate in character between nuncrame work and Irish crochet lace. The effect is very beautiful and brilliant. When straw is employed, the lace is quite stiff and unyielding, but with other filaments it is as soft and bendable as brussels point.-Now York Mail and Express.

Perhaps Boston is troubled about the war's being brought to her doors for the same reason which is filling the Chicago girl with a desire to go to the war. "We would all like to go to the war," one Chicago girl says, "if the men are going to be killed off, so that if we live it must be as a lot of horrid old maids. Nobody seems to think what a massacre of the eligibles means to us girls. Yes, it would be infinitely better to die as a set of heroic Jonn of Arcs than to live long lives as dreary

Do You Wear Eyeglasses?

To be really chie, says an English observer, there are coveral things a woman must attend to. The most notable at present is the eyeglass chain. Gold is too easily imitated, and pearl chains although adorable, are excensive. A pretty idea is to have a twist of tiny silk cords to match one's dress clasped here and there with jewelsdiamonds if you can afford them, pearls or amethysts if they suit your dress; but steel, if these are beyond you, has a certain catchet, for its sober charms appeal not to the vulgar, and really good steel is not quite the cheapest thing in the market.

Mrs. Sewall's Hope,

The Countess of Aberdeen made a feeling reference to the hostilities between the United States and Spain at the convention of the National Council of Women of Canada which opened at Ottawa May 17. Mrs. May Wright Sewall, president of the national council of the United States, expressed appreciation of Lady Aberdeen's kind words. Mrs. Sewall was much affected when referring to the war, but said she hoped it would develop a feeling of responsibility on the part of women in regard to the civic life and international relations of the state.

Skipping the Rope. With the spring advent of the skipping rope mothers will do well to see that the small girl does not indulge in her favorite diversion to any great ex tent, says the Boston Courier. It is a poor form of exercise, tending to exhaust the heart without any corresponding advantages. Running is one of the best exercises for girls. It expands the chest, draws air into the lungs and tends to cultivate grace of movement. It was the favorite torm of exercise with the old Greeks-models still for grace and symmetry of figure.

condition, and the absence of which is Among the many articles made from ork waste is the familiar cork grip for sievele handles. By a secret process the waste is pressed into the required shape, and, strange to say, the grips thus nade are stronger and more durable than those manufactured from cork wood, although the latter gives a much smoother finish. Cork slabs for insulating purposes, life preservers, cork soles and insoles and penholders are also made from cork waste. It is very largely used for a filler in the lining of cold storage and ice houses, since cork is a conconductor of heat.

Another and a unique use of cork is that to which it is put in the interior ronwork and plates of ironclads and amers between the bottom of the vessel and the second or false floor in order o prevent rust. The interior surface of he ironwork is coated with paint, and while the latter is still wet it is powdered with cork dust in the same way above the breeze that you feel close to that wood is sanded to resemble stone. The waste sometimes takes the place of asbestus in covering steam pipes. Both cork wood and waste make a very desirable handle or grip for fish poles, which is a comparatively recent idea. Cork hats and helmets, gill or seine corks, ring buoys and mooring buoys, cork fenders for vessels and cork caps or washers for tops of cans represent also some of the uses of this article.-New

Gons For Battleships. It appears that the tendency in the British and the United States navies is to reduce the number of guns and to in crease their arcs of fire and also to have no guns above 6 inch caliber for supporting the 12 or 13 inch. This method of decreasing the number and caliber of guns is an ideal theory for reducing weights, but ships are built to carry guns and to fight, and it would seem better to reduce weights elsewhere than in the battery and ammunition. In an engagement between battleships of similar armor and displacement which one will probably be the victor? There can be but one answer. It will be the one that effectively delivers the greatest amount of steel against the other ship. During the engagement each ship will necessarily lose the use of numerous guns and men, and therefore the ship that carries the larger number of guns and that has a reserve force of men below in p steeted places for filling the vacancies at the remaining gans will pertainly have the advantage, and some bscure guns that are generally looked upon with disfavor on account of their small arcs of fire may, at the critical moment when their companions of larger arcs are dismounted, become the means

The French are very temperate in food and drink, a cup of coffee with a piece of bread being considered quite sufficient until noon, when the dejeuner a la fourchette is served. This consists of a first course of eggs or macaroni, a second of one chop each or stew, and a third of fruit and cheese. Plenty of bread (always good in France) is eaten during the meal, but butter rarely, and ter, but never iced or sweetened, is including the children. Dinner, usually at 7 o'clock, is a little more elaborate meal, from which soup and a salad are seldom omitted, and black coffee is often served with cognae at the end. Owing to the fact that so much chicory is used French coffee is not much to the taste of Anglo-Saxons. Queer Funeral Mistakes In Maine. There have been some queer mistakes made of all kinds, but this is one of the most unusual and undesirable, although no real harm was done: A man, one time prominent in professional life of this city, died. He was a member of certain society in this city, which sent representatives to the funeral. The members of the organization were notified of the death of their fellow meanber by postul cards sent out by the secretary. One of the cards was addressed to and delivered at the late residence of the dead member, inviting him to attend his own obsequies.

A similar incident was, if anything, worse. A member of a secret society died and his fellows were notified of his death and the time and place of the floats, a human butterfly, along the scarfuneral, as usual. A eard was delivered at the address of the dead man, directed to him in his own handwriting. There is a condition possible to some low souls that if not really the highest most men of noble mold were select tion possible. It is the unawed tran ty, the absolute inability to fear, that some men, not many, possess, or rather, one should say, by which some men are possessed. An instance of such courage on a low plane is that of Poemkin kicking aside the blood; head of his predecessor as he stepped to the block, an act almost indelicate enough to be humorous, yet withal significant of an iron nerve.

Somewhere in the late seventies an ther Russian, but this time a savant, gave a proof of what length a rapt in tensity of purpose will carry a man to. In order to make good his theory that a be provided with soles from eight to suicide may be deliberate and unrepent-ing he subjected himself to hideous torture, ending in death, but under such circumstances that he might have relinquished his design at any stage of its progress. He lay on his back upon a bedstead from which he had stripped all the clothing, with a lamp placed unerneath him so that the flame just ched his spine, rising at intervals to make notes, which were afterward published. They show a calm spirit of research and are slightly triumphant in tone, though touched into high relief once or twice by an expression of anguish.-F. Foster in North American Quaint Fashions In Manilla.

Geri of the erient earth and open sen, Manilia, that in thy lap and on thy breast and so on. The quatrain, with an unirs portant emendation, is from Eawring. It sounds fine and rings false. Manilla used to be regarded as the most fortunately situated city in the world. Just why is a problem. Set beneath a torrid remote from the routes of commerce, it has squatted, unbeeding and practically unbecded, the capital of a stretch of unfortunate isles. Visitors have been infrequent. The earliest was Magellan. The most recurrent has been the typhoon. The most pertinacious has been the earthquake.

Objects of interest are few. Among them is the mestizo. Superstitions as a ballad, languorous as a screnade, she let lanes. Another feature is the cli mate. Fancy a pastille burning in a vapor bath. The atmosphere has the savor of cachous and the bite of red peppers. Costane, in consequence, is brief.

The mantilla of the medizo is her hair.

Her raiment is silk, very bright, very loose. The male half caste wears tronsors and a shirt. The tails of the latter of the latter of the latter. sers and a shirt. The tails of the latter are not always tucked in. On high days gaudy. So much for local fashion.-Edgar Saltus in Coltier's Weekly.

Appetite and Ambition.

"I was tired and bad no appetite or ambition. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and it gave me permanent relief. I attribute my present good health to the fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has purified and enriched my blood, has I earnestly recommend it for a debilitated system." Miss Mary Honecker, St. Clair, Pa.
