Cubans' Shady Methods.

A correspondent writing from Santiago says: Since the surrender of the Spanish troops the Americans have learned much concerning the methods of the Cubans. A Spanish general under Linares said to me, while praising the valor of the Americans: "We could have whipped all the revolutionists on the island in two months if we could have found them." Within a week from the time the United States forces landed Cuban veracity was at a discount. The Cuban leaders lied about everyting-the number of available men they had, to begin with. Garcia promised to supply 5,000 soldiers properly armed and equipped, but when he paraded his army before General Shafter there were less than 1,500. They were all armed with Connecticut-made machetes, whose utility as a war weapon was not subsequently proved, and with Springfield and Krag-Jorgensen rifles fornished by the United

As far as can be determined, not single Spanish soldier was killed in open warfare by a Cuban. Garciaand his men were permitted the widest latitude in operating against the Spaniards. To Garcia was entrusted the duty of heading off General Pando and 6,000 Spanish troops from reaching Santiago from Holguin. Pando's route was known, and there was no apparent reason why Garcia did not engage him, or, at least, hold him back until American re-enforcements arrived. Pando, who reached Santiago after the surrender, says he did not see a single Cub in soldier from the time he left Holgain until he reached Santiago.

The only active work in which Cubans participated was at El Caney, where the American troops made a brave assault upon the Spanish fortifications and captured them. The work of the Cubans here was of a most boisterous character. They principally distinguished themselves, according to who had been wounded and in "cutting

Useful Housekeeping Hints-

One may as well expect to "gather figs of thisties" as to make firm and delicately flavored jelly of half-grown or over-ripe fruit.

Pectose, the substance which gives firmness to fruit, and, when freed by boiling, yields jelly, is at lie best in every respect when the fruit is perfectly rips, but from that time it commences to deteriorate. As a choice between two evils, then, uncipe fruit is preferable to over-ripe, but the jelly produced from the former will be neither as finely-flavored or colored as though the

As a rule, large berries and currants yield more juice than the smaller ones, In fact, it is good economy to buy prime fruit of all kinds for jelly.

Don't worry. In the tangled skein Of life, a worrying thought But complicates the kinks of pain.

And tightens up each knot. Make Will the master of your mood;

Through suxious fear and doubt, No prace, no pleasure, and no good Was ever brought about, Don't worry. Do the best you can, And let Hope conquer care.

No more is asked of any man Than he has strength to bear. The back is fitted for the load ; Your fordens all are planned; And if you sing along the road Kind Fate will lend a hand. Don't warry. Fortune is a dame

You have to woo with smiles, Whate'er her mood you must not bl Nor criticise her wiles, Trust God in shadow and in sun, And luck will come your way, But never since Old Time begun Has worzy won the day.
