Mr. Colborn is well read both in common and statute law; he is a safe, wise and judicious counselor, an attorney who conscientiously looks after the interests of his clients. Mr. Colborn has won the grateful appreciation of the thoughtful people of the county by h.s capable, persistent and successful endeavors to upbuild and improve the condition of our indigent poor, through his official association as counsel and clerk to the various poor boards. The indigent poor have but few pleasures in this world at best, and the little that it takes to provide them with a clean, comortable home in which to pass the weary hours is freely given by the good people of the county.
