If all who hate would love us,

And all our loves were true,

The stars that swing above us

If cruel words were kisses,

A better world than this is

It purses would untighten

To meet a brother's need,

Above the grave of greed.

The rose would rout the thistic

The grain outran the chaff;

If hearts were only jully,

If grieving were forgot,

A bridal power of beauty,

A dream within a dream,

If men would cense to worry,

And women cease to sigh

If neighbor spake to neighbor,

The rust would eat the saber,

The spear stay on the wall;

Then every day would glisten,

And every eye would shine,

And God would pause to listen,

And life would be divine.

'how my arm aches !"

As love demands of all,

And all be glad to bury

Whatever has to die-

The load we bear would lighten

If those who whine would whistle,

And those who languish laugh,

Were things that now are not-

Then love would kneel to duty.

And all the world would seem

And every soowl a smile,

Would brighten in the blue;

Would hardly be worth while;
