FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

Cleanliness in Milking-Value of Wood Ashes on Crops.

Custom has done much to cause failure in dairying. On hundreds of farms the milking is done by men who have pipes in their mouths or whose hands have not been washed, while the washing of the teats and udders of the cows is sever done. It is well known that despite the use of stanchious and clean bedding there is considerable fifth in the stalls and the cows are not very careful in selecting the cleanest portions of the stalls, the result being that more or less of the solid and liquid manure adheres to the udder; and if the stalls are made damp during the night by the cow her sides will also be covered with filth. When cows are on the pasture their udders are cleaner at night than in the morning, but at all milkings the This is the month of "commence- hands of the milker should be washed, ments," when sweet girl and sturdy and also the udders and teats of the up the responsibilities of life and make all fifth that dissolves in water is carried 1. The average number of bushels of corn per acre is 24. It requires as much erop, and there should be a gain in that direction also. No crop responds than corn, and it is one of the surest crops grown, all difficulties considered, and in comparison with other crops. About 20 per cent, of the value of all foods consumed by steek is regained in the manure. That is, if a farmer uses a dollar's worth of food and sells the produce therefrom for only one dollar he has 20 cents' worth of manure, or more, left over. The manure heap is where the profits go, and this profit is again utilized for increasing the crops another year. No farmer can make a fair estimate of his receipts and expenses unless he attaches a value to his manure and gives it a place in his item of accounts. It represents capital ready for investment, and it gives better dividends than anything else on the farm. Barren land may serve well for sheep, but to expect sheep to thrive on such but the sheep must be assisted.
