Useful Hints.

The falling out of ornaments embedted in wood, where a visible screw is not desirable, is frequently very troub'esome, and a renewed gluing in rarely obviates the evil, if it is omitted to dip the metal pieces previously in weak nitric acid for about half a minute, says a German contemporary. Such a bath with subsequent drying, imparts a moderate roughness to the metallic surfaces, which makes the glue "seize" much better. The glue employed must be exceedingly viscous and never brittle. It is prepared as usual and receives a small addition-about a teaspoonful-of glycerine and as much of slaked lime. During the boiling the mixture should be stirred together intimately, so that the admixture can properly combine with the glue. It should be applied hot on the slightly Proposal to Tear it Down for the warmed pieces, which should be quickly pressed into the wood. The glue must not be thin, but syrup-like.
