this statement is the fact of the extreme nildness of the disease, the mortality being astonishingly low. At the same time the fact that fatal cases have occurred is sufficient to exclude the diagnosis of chicken-pox and impetigo contagiosa. It can be readily understood, however, that the practitioner might easily be thrown off his guard by this peculiarity of the epidemic. When, in addition to this, it is borne in mind that, owing to the beneficent influence of vaccination, smallpox has become a disease of very infrequent occurrence in this State, thus making it impossible for the great majority of than otherwise that they should fail to recognize it. The warning note issued by the State Board of Health some months in advance of the invasion, pointing out the steady progress of the disease from Florida up along the coast, and calling especial attention to its mild character, might indeed have aroused their suspicions, but does not seem to have been The circular concludes with specific in-
