

CONFESSIONS OF SHEETS AND WELLER COMPLICIT.

Former Declares the Latter Held Murdered Man's Hand While He Riddled His Pockets.

SHEETS GOT MOST OF THE "SWAG."

Notwithstanding the fact that Harry Weller and Milton Sheets have with them confessed to the murder of Augustus Gleason, and have made public all the gross details of the horrible tragedy, there are still some persons who are disposed to believe that the true story will not come out until it is told on the witness stand, when they profess to know the truth. It is a case, therefore, of two men who will be implicated in the crime.

After relieving their minds last Tuesday night, Weller and Sheets rested quiet. They were so comfortable that they again rested their minds, and the next morning they were in bed. It was not until late in the afternoon that they were aroused by the sound of a door opening. Sheets awoke and saw that the door was open. He looked toward the door and saw that it was open. He looked toward the door and saw that it was open. He looked toward the door and saw that it was open.

JUST ESCAPED THE GALLOWS.

Two Innocent Men Who Might Have Been Hanged on Circumstantial Evidence.

DETECTIVE EGAN TELLS THE STORY.

The chagrin and disappointment of Detective Egan, K. P., can be better imagined than described when he learned that all his efforts to apprehend the murderers of Augustus Gleason had come to naught, and that the two men who had made a confession to a distinguished party, and had begged that the detective should not be permitted to conduct him to jail.

In justice to the two men, it should be stated, however, that he worked diligently on the case, and was so close on the trail of the guilty parties that the voluntary confession of Weller and Sheets, in the presence of the detective, was due to his efforts, and to the valuable aid rendered him by High Constable Irvin Ream, of Berlin, Ream was entering in his endeavor to discover the murderers and his intimate knowledge of the habits of the men suspected of the crime and his intelligent work in conjunction with Egan's is perhaps after all, responsible for the fact that two innocent men were saved from long penitentiary sentences or the hangman's noose.

CONFESSOR'S MIND.

Weller and Sheets Rested Quietly.

On the Saturday night that Gust Gleason was murdered, Milton Sheets asked me to go along up the alley behind the street and Ream buildings. After we reached the alley, they took a round heavy, whisky bottle, and carrying it down the street to Long's, and from there they walked across the street and down the street to Long's, and from there they walked across the street and down the street to Long's.
