A horrible triple cremation occurred at an early hour Saturday morning in the mining town of Coal Run, three miles from Salisbury. Charles, Allan and Thomas Stott were burned to death and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stott, barely escaped alive. The boys, who were 14, 16 and 19 years of age respectively, were sound asleep, when their elder brother, who slept in the same room, arose about three o'clock to resume work in the mine where he was employed on the night shift. He left a coul oil lamp burning in the bedroom, and, going down stairs, kindled a fire in the kitchen stove. After eating a hastily-prepared breakfast and filling his lunch bucket, he left the which the people, especially those whose house.
