Kiss My Wife or Fight. There are a few married men who are not averse to seeing their wives kissed, but a correspondent relates the particulars of a case in which a newly-wedded Benedict felt himself insulted because his wife was not kissed. The bridegroom was a stalwart young man, who was known as a formidable operator in a "free fight."

Seeing is Believing. A notorious scamp was once brought before an Onondaga justice of the peace. He was accused of having "come the strap game" over a native. The portly justice, wishing to decide understandingly, asked to see a sample of his skill.

A certain professor was noted for having a certain set illustrations from which he could not well deviate without running the risk of a blunder. In illustrating the powerful effects of prussic acid, he was wont to inform the class that a drop placed on a dog's tongue was sufficient to kill him.

There is a story in the Des Moines Register about an Ohio girl who came to Muscatine in the spring of 1861, and in the fall enlisted in the 24th Iowa Infantry, in which regiment she served till the close of the war.

Legislating on Hoops. In the Canadian House of Assembly, some time since, they had quite a spirited debate on the bill to prohibit crinolines, introduced by Mr. Aikens. We publish a few of the most brilliant passages. Mr. Drummond was an ardent admirer of hoops from childhood. He was born with a love of hoops. When he was a child of tender growth he used to trundle his hoop, all unconscious of the fate that was in store for him.

Too Poor. Moore, of the Rural New-Yorker, was sitting in his office, one afternoon, some years ago, when a farmer friend came in and said: "Mr. Moore, I like your paper, but times are so hard I cannot pay for it."

How Count Rumford Freed Bavaria of Beggars. BY EDMUND QUINCY. Bavaria was eaten up by pauperism and beggary, in town and country. This had long been the despair of her ministers of state and religion. It was reserved for an adventurer from beyond seas to free the state from these cloying mischiefs.

Long engagements. "Long engagements," writes a young lady, "are going out of fashion, young men being at last convinced of the stupidity of making matrimonial engagements until they are in a position to fulfill their promise at once."

Sixteen Reasons. A writer in one of our exchanges gives the following plain and forcible reasons for abstinence from the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. It is a view sanctioned both by religion and common sense: 1. Because ale, porter, gin, rum, brandy, etc., all contain a spirit which is calculated to derange the human system.

"A Large Contract." A pretty good story is told of him self (says the Boston Traveler) by a season ticket holder on the Boston and Maine Railroad—a wide-awake, jolly, generous, joke-loving gentleman, Democratic in his politics and liberal in his religion.

An optical illusion.—A chandler having had some candles stolen, a person bid him be of good cheer, "for, in a short time," said he, "they will all come to light."

A young man being asked why the hair on the top of his head was so thin, exclaimed, "The girls pulled it out pulling me in at the window."

Gunpowder. When gunpowder was first discovered to possess a projectile power, its military application was confined to a kind of mortar or bombard, intended as a substitute for the enormous battering machines then usually constructed.

Almost any young lady has public spirit enough to be willing to have her father's house used for a court-house.

"I think the Earth, but I am not quite certain." The following is told of a young society gentleman, who graduated from Harvard at the examination of physics he was asked: "Mr. —, what planets were known to the ancients?"

The ex-Emperor Napoleon says that his return to France is only a question of time, and that sooner or later he will be restored to power.
