WANTED--Men and Women seeking a good paying business to sell our illustrated, historical, biographical, religious and agricultural works.

Some people love others so much better than themselves that they are vastly more concerned about their neighbor's affairs than about their own.

Camarache Bill.

The Detroit Post says: Camarache Bill is in this city, stopping at the Garrison House. He was in Chicago during the fire, and lost his rifle and some valuable papers.

His real name is George W. Potter, and he is not more than twenty-five years of age, of medium stature, and lithe and wiry build.

He wears a broad-brimmed black felt hat, and his luxuriant brown hair streams down over his shoulders.

He says his home is at Fort Grant, Arizona, though for what particular reason he calls that his home he can't say.

The object of his life is to rescue his sister, who was taken in the Minnesota massacre in 1862, and to avenge the death of the rest of his family who were murdered at that time.

He is an excellent representative of the hunter and scout of the plains, finding his highest enjoyment in roving over the almost boundless wilds of the Western Territories.

He rolls himself up in a blanket and camps on the floor. He says he is going back next month to continue the search for his sister.

A Wife from the Wild.

In the early history of a certain mining town of the Montana frontier, is embalmed a wild little bit of romance, which a correspondent of the Alta California derives from the recital of one who witnessed what he relates.

Whether this spectacle meant a defiant taunt, or a challenge for ransom, was what could not be at once decided by the miners generally.

A Bewildered Englishman.

Among the arrivals at the Newhall House on the awful Monday, when Chicago was in flames, was an Englishman in company with Mr. Delmonico, of New York.

After visiting one or two other places, he fetched up in Chicago, and had been there, at the Sherman House, but a few days, when the great conflagration started him out of bed at night.

William Scott was romantic and he loved Miss Horn to distraction. Unable to conceal his feelings he revealed them to the object of his affections.

The Mississippi has almost dried up. The majestic river whose magnificent volume two thousand miles from its outlet, has been the theme of tourist's admiration.

A London watchmaker has constructed a gold hunting watch, which, in addition to being a timekeeper of the utmost precision, with chronometer adjustments, compensation balance and cylindrical spring, exhibits on the dial plate the following different indications.

Mr. Speaker, said a member of the Jamaica Legislature, discussing a bill for the regulation of the timber trade, "I know these merchants to be the most egregious rascals--I was in the timber line myself twelve years."

Mr. Partington, in an illustration of the proverb, "A soft answer turneth away wrath," says that it is better to speak paragonically of a person than to be all the time flinging epithets at him.

A paper says, in an obituary notice that "the deceased had been for several years director of a bank notwithstanding which he died a Christian, and universally respected."

CLIPTOGRAMS.

A cultivated mind may be said to have infinite stores of gratification. Everything may be made interesting to it, by becoming a subject of thought or inquiry.

It is a poor rule that won't work both ways. A Georgia negro thought he would economize by sending his son to school and then make the boy teach him. The plan worked well until the young teacher, following the custom of the seminary where he was taught, gave the old man a thrashing for spelling dog d-o-r-g, and then the latter became disgusted and ran away.

The Rev. Misses Clamptan an eccentric preacher, held forth at Santa Clara Valley; a young man rose to go out, when the preacher said: "Young man, if you'd rather go to perdition than hear me preach, you may."

A Connecticut democrat sent his son to New York to complete his education. After a short time the son wrote to his father that he was studying Horace. On learning this the paternal parent replied, "Come, home; I don't want Greeley to make a republican of my son."

A postcard Vermont presents his views of the season in this fashion: "We know that Autumn is here, from the fact that the swallow syndicates discuss the question when to homeward fly, and the yellow pumpkins now dot the rural landscape like golden nutmegs on the sands of Ophir."

Happy bridegroom--"More money, madam! more money! Have you forgotten that my money has bought every thing you possess--the very dress you stand in!" "Fair bride--"No sir! Nor have I forgotten that your money has bought what stands in it!"

Like a morning dream life becomes more and more bright the longer we live, and the reason of everything becomes more clear. What has puzzled us before seems less mysterious, and the crooked paths look straighter as we approach the end.

Mr. Speaker, said a member of the Jamaica Legislature, discussing a bill for the regulation of the timber trade, "I know these merchants to be the most egregious rascals--I was in the timber line myself twelve years."

Sweepings.

Literature is the immortality of speech. The woman question--"Is he married?" A friend that you buy with presents, will be bought from you.

It is a funny thing about a dentist, that the more he stops the faster he gets on. It is all very well to say, "Take things as they come," but suppose they don't come?

Resolve to perform what you ought, and perform without fail what you resolve. It would be used as a shield for defense rather than a sword to wound others.

The light of friendship is like the light of phosphorus--seen plainest when all around is dark. Confess ignorance in regard to subjects on which you are uninformed; listen and learn.

A Western genius is catching fleas, pulling out their legs, and selling them for flax seed. Opinions founded on mere prejudice are always sustained with the greatest violence.

"The dearest spot on earth," has at length been located. It is at the store that does not advertise. Poverty, like other bullies, is formidable only to those who show that they are afraid of it.

Reading furnishes us only with matter of knowledge; it is thinking that makes what we read our own. Our characters are formed and sustained by ourselves and by our own actions and purposes, and not by others.

Better go without the pearls which lie at the bottom of a deep and rapid river than encounter the risk of diving for them. The road ambition travels is too narrow for friendship, too crooked for love, too rugged for honesty, and too dark for conscience.
