ADDRESS

To the Nervous

AND DEBILITATED.

WHOSE sufferings have been protracted from hidden causes, and whose cases require prompt treatment to render existence desirable:

If you are suffering, or have suffered from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce on your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urinary organs, or your kidneys, frequently get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky or frothy, or is itropy on setting? Or does a thick skum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling on this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, moping, tired of company, or life? Do you wish to be left alone, away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as brilliant? The bloom on your cheek as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you restless nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver-complaint?

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business-men are always those whose generative organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in the company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflated by running to excess. Those will not only ruin their constitutions, but also those they do business with or for.

Disorders of these organs require the use of a Diuretic. HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU is the great Diuretic, and is a certain cure for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, Dropsy, Organic Weakness, Female Complaints, General Debility, and all diseases of the Urinary Organs, whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu, established upward of 19 years, prepared by H. T. HELMBOLD, Druggist, 204 Broadway, New York, and 104 South 10th Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Price—$1.25 per bottle or 6 bottles for $6.50, delivered to any address. Sold by all Druggists every where.

The Republican Office

KEEPS constantly on hand a large assortment of Blank Deeds, Mortgages, Subpoenas, Warrants, Summons, &c. to be sold cheap for cash.

Oil Regions in Virginia.

A traveling correspondent of the Washington Chronicle does the oil regions of West Virginia, in the following style. Writing from Catlettsburg, under date of October 20th, he says:

I arrived here a few days since, after having visited a portion of the oil regions of West Virginia. To do that I returned on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, a distance of twenty-two miles from Parkersburg, and stopped at Petroleum, where I met an old friend in the person of Colonel Van H. Backey, who is agent of the west Virginia Transportation Company at that point. The Colonel is a young man, who entered the army as a private at the breaking out of the rebellion, and rose through the different grades until he was given the command of his regiment, and received from the hands of General Phil. Sheridan, on the field of Winchester, the eagle which designated his rank. In his company I rode horseback up Oil Creek Run about three miles, and saw the works of the company he represents. The whole region is a forest of derricks, and the clang of machinery echoes through the hills as it drives the pumps, whose arms can be seen for miles around, drawing the oleaginous fluid from "the bowels of the harmless earth." As this is drawn forth it is conveyed through miles of iron pipe and emptied into reservoirs or vats, whence it is pumped by steam power into the tanks on the cars setting on the railroad track, and carried to any point desired. This oil is the only article the company transports, and its mode of doing so has been brought to an almost complete system. The miles of pipes have been laid, at large expense, under ground, and are connected with each well. For conveying the oil from its source to the railroad track an agreed amount is paid by the individual or company working it, and thus the name of "Transportation Company" has been taken by the corporation working it. Lying away back among the hills, about two miles from the engine which runs this work, sits the oil center, known as the White Oak Region, and in its center lies Volcano.

On ascending the top of the hill by the regular wagon road there appears within sight a legion of tall scaffolds, surrounding the wells which dot the hills all around, the appearance being a perfect amphitheater crowded by a hive of busy workmen. The place contains a population of about three thousand, and has some large stores, a post office, telegraph station, and a newspaper, published weekly. This organ of public opinion is a sprightly sheet, well patronized with advertising, and is entitled The Volcano Lubricator. It is issued by Messrs. Sargent & Brown, and is devoted to the development of the resources of that region of West Virginia and particularly the oil and coal. The excitement which followed the discovery of oil in that region in 1860-61, and which was followed by large speculations in land, has in a great measure, died out, but there is an extensive and steady amount of work going on in the production and shipping of the crude petroleum from this and all the region surrounding and along the Little Kanawha. There is a large refinery on the Parkersburg side of the Ohio river, where a considerable amount of the crude article is made into a superior quality, the quantity being only limited to the capacity of the machinery, which is kept running day and night.

Romantic Result of a Stare.

A beautiful and wealthy young lady, at a social party, took offence at what she supposed to be the impertinent gaze of a gentleman present, who was a stranger to her, but a friend of the lady of the house. The young lady demanded his expulsion as a condition of her remaining. Explanations ensued. The gentleman was not looking at her, though beautiful enough to attract and fasten the attention of any one. He was looking at a fine and costly chain that encircled the fair one's neck—just such a one as he had purchased for his sister in one of the links of which [having a secret opening] he had put his photograph. But, some months since, and before he had an opportunity to present it to his sister, it was stolen from him. Upon examining the lady's chain he touched a spring [to the little beauty unknown] and lo, and behold! there was his photograph!

I leave you to judge of the confusion of the fair one. She immediately offered to return the piece of jewelry, which was politely declined, for the time, and it is said by knowing ones that she has concluded to accept of the young man's hand and heart, in order that being the possessor of the one, she may be permitted to retain the other. It is but justice to remark that the young lady bought the chain of a traveling pedlar, who stopped at her father's house, for about one-half of its original cost.

COUNTY PAPERS.

The following short article, copied from an exchange, expresses about as much truth in a small space as it is possible to do.

"We sometimes meet with individuals who complain of their county paper, and cease to take it, preferring to subscribe for a city paper. They do not seem to comprehend the facts in relation to the publication and support of papers. In the first place the terms of nearly all city papers are the same as county papers—$2 for a single copy, and the only way they can get them for a less price is by clubbing and sending for a number of copies at a time. Then, again, they must invariably send the money in advance, which they seldom do for their county paper. But the principal difference consists in the fact that it costs the publisher of the county paper the same to set his type that it does the city publisher, and setting is the principal expense in publishing a newspaper of small circulation. After the type is once set, the expense then is merely for the blank paper and press work. And a paper with a hundred thousand circulation can better afford to take one dollar a year, than the paper with a thousand subscribers, two dollars. Of course, the large city papers contain a larger amount of reading matter than the county papers, but which is the most useful and interesting? Do the city papers say anything in regard to your own county? Nothing. Do they contain notices of your schools, church meetings, improvements and hundreds of other local matters of interest, which the county papers publish without pay? Not an item. Do they ever say a word calculated to draw attention to our county and its numerous thriving towns and aid in their progress and enterprise? Not a line. And yet there are men who take contracted views of this matter, that, unless they are getting in many square inches of reading matter in their county paper, as they do in a city paper, that they are not getting the worth of their money. It reminds us of the person who took the largest pair of boots in the box, simply because they cost the same as the pair much smaller, that fit."

The following piece of "economy is equal to some that is taking place in New York in these days: The Town Council of Edinburgh, Scotland, having received intelligence that the rope of the chief bell had given away, met at a solemn dinner to discuss whether it should be spliced at a cost of two shillings, or replaced with a new one at an expense of two and six pence. A second and third dinner, costing £10 each, were required to determine this weighty matter, and they then resolved to splice the old rope, on the score of economy being necessary in the administration of the public funds, of which they declared that, "as faithful stewards, they were bound to be careful," thus setting a memorable example to all future civic corporations.

The New Webster is glorious—it is perfect—it distances and defies competition—it leaves nothing to be desired. As a monument of literary labor, or as a business enterprise, magnificent in conception and almost faultless in execution, I think it equally a admirable; and you should do tomorrow, you may feel that, so far as earthly honor is concerned, your monument is built.

But I cannot doubt that a grateful country will appreciate the immense service you have rendered to the national language, scholarship, and reputation by this great work, and in due time render you an adequate reward.—J. H. Raymond, L. L. D. Pres. Vassar College.
