Blue Eyes Behind the Veil. Mr. Edge was late at breakfast. That was not an unusual occurrence, and he was disposed to be cross; which was likewise nothing new.

Dear, didn't you say you were going to have a hundred dollars for my new furs, to-day? 'What furs?' (rather shortly was this spoken.) 'Pshaw! What is the use of being so extravagant? I have no money to lay out in useless follies.'

'Well, a fellow can't be forever waiting on women, can he?' growled Mr. Edge. 'You could be polite enough to Mrs. Waters, last night, when you never thought to ask whether I wanted anything, though, you knew perfectly well that I had a headache—I don't believe you care as much for me as you used to.'

'Pshaw,' said the husband peevishly. 'Now don't be silly, Maria.'

'What lovely eyes,' quoth he mentally, as he bestowed a single acknowledging smile. 'Real violet, the very color I most admire! Bless me! what business have old men like me to be thinking about eyes. There she has drawn a confounded veil over her face, and the light is as dim as a tallow dip; but those were pretty eyes!'

'Are you cold, Miss? Pray honor me by wearing my shawl. I do not need it myself.'

'No trouble—not a bit,' said he, with alacrity, arranging it on her tapering shoulders, and then as the young lady handed her fire to the conductor, he said to himself, 'what a slender little hand! if there is anything I admire in a woman it is a pretty hand. Wonder what kind of a mouth she has got? it must be a delightful one if it corresponds with the hair and eyes—plague take the veil!'

'Thank you, sir,' was the soft reply coming from behind the veil, as Mr. Edge reflected—like an angel from a dark cloud. And his heart gave a large thump as the pretty shoulder touched his own shaggy overcoat in a hesitating sort of a way.

Fallacies as to Diet. A fallacy, in regard to diet, is to suppose that the natural appetite is not the best guide as to the quantity and quality of our food.

These doctrines are monstrous. They are unworthy of the nineteenth century. They are a libel on the Creator who gave us taste and appetite, in order that we might know what to eat and drink, and gave us also judgment to direct appetite and taste when the system becomes diseased.

Another common fallacy in regard to diet, is the theory that one or two kinds of food, at each meal, are more easily digested, and more wholesome than a large and palatable variety.

Our books on health tell us over and over again that two articles at each meal are sufficient, and that we shall be liable to eat more if the table is covered with a generous variety.

Genius never made any lady a good cook. The art is acquired by close study and patient practice, by many and repeated failures. A good cook can make a pleasant and healthful meal out of a few simple articles.

A gentleman writing of a "long" acquaintance, says there is among his acquaintances one at least who enjoys a "high" reputation, for he stands over seven feet in his stockings, and though a talented member of the bar, he is a good natured, modest citizen.

It is a height of meanness to impute a man on his own dagger, but some people are unscrupulous. The editor of the Hudson (N. Y.) Star received an acrostic recently, which he innocently published, not knowing that it implicitly said: "A. N. Webb is an ass."

Ex-Senator Gwin is going to make money out of his new gold mine—Boston Post.

They Will all do so. A young man, a son of a well-to-do farmer, had the misfortune to become deeply enamored of a young lady, and after a brief courtship, proposed and was accepted.

The morning encouraged him, however, and dew drenched and sorrowful, he sought his home, when his mother, with true maternal solicitude, questioned him as to his sad looks.

'That's all right, Johnny,' said Hank, quietly; 'we don't need your services any more.'

'Well, I don't think you treated me exactly fair,' Hank dryly replied. 'You ought to have given me another chance for that four shill'n.'

Fates of the Apostles. Matthew is supposed to have suffered martyrdom, or was slain in the city of Ethiopia.

John was put in a caldron at Rome, but escaped death. He died a natural death at Ephesus, Asia.

Trade with a Monkey. Monkeys are scarce in Michigan. A saddler in Detroit kept one for a pet, who usually sat on the counter, the proprietor being in the back room.

An Indiana editor is represented as "squawking back a squeak of soul-gained bliss."

Another Chance. Doubtless all of the readers of Mosaic have heard the story of the young man who applied to Dean Richmond for a position as conductor on the New York Central Railroad, and was asked if he had a gold watch, diamond breast-pin, and other similar trinkets.

'That's all right, Johnny,' said Hank, quietly; 'we don't need your services any more.'

'Well, I don't think you treated me exactly fair,' Hank dryly replied. 'You ought to have given me another chance for that four shill'n.'
