FRED. GLASSNER, Treasurer.

WHEAT GROWING IN NEBRASKA.

This State is now attracting considerable attention as one of the best fields for settlement in the Union. Its climate and soil it meets the conditions required for the successful cultivation of all the productions of the temperate zone, and also some of the sub-tropical.

It is not often that corn and wheat thrive equally well in any country; but as it is in Nebraska, corn is the first staple crop, of course; but so soon as the farmer is well settled upon the land, he puts in wheat. The wheat of Nebraska is in good favor; and in St. Louis and Chicago markets its price averaged several cents per bushel more than the wheat of the neighboring States can command. In bread making qualities the wheat of Nebraska only ranks second to that of California, with which it does not come into competition.

The agricultural triumphs which have been achieved in Nebraska are the work of little more than ten years, and as the country is settled, and the position of the farmer becomes easier, wheat ranks higher among the crops of the country. In 1860, when the population was 28,000 the wheat crop amounted to 147 867 bushels, or about 5¼ bushels per head; and in 1870, when the population was 122,000, the wheat crop was 2,125,096 bushels, or a little under 17½ bushels per head.

The population of 1873 can only be estimated, and therefore it is best not given; but the wheat crop of that year, (which was an unfavorable agricultural year,) amounted to 3,000,000 bushels. The record is therefore still one of advancement for the young State; and it is to be remembered that stock raising, fruit culture, corn growing, and all other agricultural work advances equally with wheat raising. Nebraska is therefore a promising State for the settler; and the more especially since it has good markets both east and west and south.

A member of the Ohio legislature recently visited the State penitentiary, and while there, had his hair cut by the prison barber. While undergoing the tonsorial process a party of lady and gentlemen visitors looked in, and the legislator was made happy by catching such remarks as: "Ugly look about the eyes," "Vicious mouth," "Looks capable of any wickedness," "Wonder what he did," etc.

A New Englaud preacher says: "The morals of the city of Washington are so corrupt that they create a stench, the odor of which causes the man in the moon to hold his nose."
