by Dan Wycle some six weeks ago.

Mr. Collins has nearly all his lumber moved to the river. Lewis Whitten claims the honor of hauling the largest load of boards that went down the plank this winter, some 6,552 feet, and this on a single pair of sleds, with a light weight team.

Mr. Rhodabarger's spellog school last Friday evening, was a complete success, and the yelling adserseching did by the sled load Fon Beaver, was enough to scare every. I cat and porky-pig out of the county.

BEAVER VALLEY CHIPS.

Snow in the woods fifteen inches deep.

On "Saturday last, as Mr. Frank Witheral was climbing on a load of logs with his gun in his hand, the hammer caught, was drawn back, and the gun discharged; fortunately no one was injured, although several persons were on the logs, among them being Frank's wife.

One day last week Mr. Ed. Witheral found a large doe lying dead in Hickory ereek, above the mouth of Otter; it is, no doubt, the one wounded by Dan Wycle some six weeks ago.

ALSO.

One day last week the Tax Collector from Newtown paid our quiet vale a visit. He wanted to see one of the boys,—only a little tax; that was all. He found the boy hunting pheasants; boy wouldn't scrip up; collector, asked to look at his gun; "Certainly." Well, the boy don't hunt any more with that gun.

On the 29th ult, a citizen of Whig Hill got on the 2 o'cluck train north, at Tiouesta. He was somewhat under the influence of liquor, but was quiet, and offended no one. When the conductor came around, he searched his pockets in vain for the required paster board, although he averred he had purchased one, and tendered the man of the panel twanty cents, which he accepted, saying he must have five cents more, or he would put the passenger off at Jamison. The five cents not being forthcoming, when the train stopped at Jamison the conductor came up to him and said, "You get off here." "No, sir, I won't," said the passenger, "here's my ticket," and offered it to him, but it pleased not the conductor, who diencangh the doff the passenger and forcibly ejected him from the train.
