TOBE'S MONUMENT.

The "seven-days' fight" was ended. The battered remnants of the Army of the Potomac were encamped at Harrison's Landing, waiting for transports to take them back to Washington.

It was "after taps," a sultry, South-ern summer night. On the extreme edge of the encampment, on the side nearest the enemy, a sentinel paused in his walk, and peered cautiously out into the darkness. "Pshaw!" he said : "It's nothing but a dog." He was re-suming his walk, when the supposed quadruped rose suddenly, and walked along on two feet, in a manner so unmistakably human that the sentinel lowered his musket once more and shouted "Halt! Advance, and give the countersign!" A faint, childish voice said, "Ain't got none, massa."
"Well there now," said the sentinel, "if it ain't just a little darkey, and I guess I've frightened him half to death. Come here, Snowball."

The child crept up, and said tremb-ling, "Deed massa, I ain't got nuffin to gib yer."

"Well, who asked you to give me anything?"

"Yer done ax me for to gib yer suffin jes' now; and I ain't got nuffin

'cept my close what I got on. "Well, you needn't fret; I don't want 'em. Corporal of guard! 'Post

The corporal hastened to "post two" and found the sentinel with his hand on the shoulder of a little black boy, who, between fear, fatigue and hunger, was unable to give an account of himself. "I'll take him to Capt. Leigh, the corporal said; "he's officer of the day. Maybe he'll be able to get something out of him."

The captain stood in front of his tent, looking out into the night, when the corporal and his charge approach-

"Captain," he said, "here's a boy just come into the lines."

"Very well, you can leave him here. At the first sound of the captain's voice, the boy drew nearer to him, as knowing instinctively that he had found a friend. "You can go into that tent and sleep till morning." said the captain. "What is your name?" was Captain

Leigh's first question in the morning.
"Name Tobe."

"Is that all ?" "Dat's all, Massa Cap'n."

"How old are you?"

"Dunno, Massa Cap'n. Nobedy nebber done tole me dat." "Where have you come from?" "Com fum de back o' Richmon', Massa Cap'n."

"What did you come here for ?"
"All de res' ob dem runned away an' old mass he wor so mad, I wor jes feared ob my life. 'Eides I t'ought I mought fin' my mammy ef I got mong

"Dunno, Massa Cap'n. Ole mass done sol' her down in Georgy las' corn-shuckin', and I ain't nebber heard ob her sence. But I t'ought methy she mought ha' runned 'way too, an' I'd-fin' her wid der Unions."

"Well, now, what are you going to do ?"

"Dunno, Massa Cap'o. I'd like. to stay 'long wid you."
"What can you do?"

"Kin wait on yer, Massa Cap'n; kin shine up boots, an" -- brightening up as his eyes went wandering round, caught sight of the horses-"kin clean de hosses right smart:"

"You are not big enough to take care of a horse.'

"'Deed I is, Massa Cap'n; an' I ain't 'fraid o' no hoss. Ole mass allus sent me ter tend de hosses dat nobody else couldn't manage. Dey alius lets me handls 'em ef dey's ebber so deb-blesome. Jes' yer try me, Massa Cap'n, an' see ef I tell de troot."

"If I keep you with me you must be a good boy, and do as I tell you."
"Deed I will, Mass Cap'n. I'se do ebery work yer say, sho's yer born." So when the troops left Harrison's Landing, Tobe went too in charge of the captain's horse and baggage; and, when the steamer was fairly under way, he brightened into a new creature as every revolution of the wheel placed a greater distance between himself and and "ole mass."

"Massa Cap'n," he asked, one day,

"Whar is we gwine at?"
"Either to Washinton or Alexandria; I don't know exactly which." "Will dar be one sto' up dar, cap'n." "Yes, there are plenty of stores. What do you want from one?"

"Please, Massa Cap'n please jess"and he stammered, and caught his breath, apparently overwhelmed with the magnitude of his desires.

"Well, out with it. What wonderful thing do you want?"
"Please, Massa Cap'n, jess buy me one banjo."

"A banjo! What on earth do you want of that?" "Kin play de banjo right smart, an' dance, too. Kin, Massa Cap'n, I plays for yer all de time." "There'd be rather too much of a good thing about that."

"Is yer gwine ter git fer it me?"
"I don't know. I'll see when we get there." Pay-day came. Everybody got fixed up; and Tobe fell heir to an old cavalry uniform. It didn't fit, to be sure. The pantaloons came up to his shoulders, and were rolled up in great bunches around his ankles; the jacket came down to his knees; and the sleeves hung like yawning caverns in which his hands disappeared so far, that it seemed doubtful if he would ever find them again. But there were the gilt buttoms and cavalry stripes; and Tobe's inmost soul rejoiced over

He was so absorbed in his clothes that he seemed to have forgotten the banjo; when, one day, the captain suddenly held up one before him. His eyes dilated till they seemed to cover half the face; and he gasped out, "Yer gwine ter gib me dat ar, Massa Cap'n?"
"You said you wanted a banjo, didn't you ?" "I knows I axed yer for ter buy me one; but I t'ought mebbe yer wouldn't gi' me de clo's an' de banjo too."

"Well, which will you have-the banjo or the clothes?"

Tobe answered not a word, but pulled off his jacket and laid it at the captain's feet. Capt. Leigh laughed. "Well," he said, "if you want a hanjo as bad as that, you shall have it. Here, take it."

"Whar mus' I put de clo's at, Massa Cap'n?"
"You needn't put them anywhere.

Keep them on. "Does yer mean to gi' me de clo's an' de banjo too?" And understand-ing at last that it was really so, Tobo gave vent to his feelings in a prolonged "Kiyi!" and walked off carrying the banjo as if it were a baby. After that there was ne lack of music. Tobe played all day, and only stopped at night, when the captain sent him to bed.

It proved that Tube had told the truth about his skill in taking care of horses. Capt. Leigh's horses had never looked so well as now, and the cap-tain was delighted. Tobe turned out moreover to be a very good boy. But the army is not a very good bay. But boys. So one day Capt. Leigh said,— "Tobe, how would you like to go North?"

"Whar's it at, Massa Cap'n?" "I mean my home at the north." "When is yer gwine, Massa Cap'n?"

"I'm not going at all now." "Does yer mean to sen' me away from yer, Massa Cap'n?"
"Yes, I want to send you away from me, now, because it will be better for you. But, when the war is over I shall go home; and then you can [CONTINUED ON FOURTH PAGE.]
