

YESTERDAY'S ELECTION

The election, so far as Forest County is concerned, is all right. Lawrence is elected Treasurer by a good majority, and if none of the Old Forest Republicans kicked over the traces, he has a very large majority. On the State ticket we will probably have our usual majorities.

This morning's Derrick gives the State to the Democracy, also New York and New Jersey. Massachusetts and Wisconsin are undoubtedly Republican. No light is shed upon the result in other States. We shall know how badly we are hurt by this time next week. In the meantime Hayes' policy remains unchanged, and Voorhees has been appointed to the U. S. Senate in Morton's place.

History of the Deceased Statesman -Hon. O. P. Morton.

CASTING ABOUT for a reliable history of the great statesman whose earthly career ended last Thursday, at 5:30 p. m., we find the following, which we copy from the Commercial-Gazette of the 2d inst.:

Senator Oliver P. Morton, whose death we chronicled yesterday, closes the list of the specially great statesmen of the war. Senator Conkling, in some respects, will take rank in this relation, but not as fully as Morton. He was a rising star before the war, but during it he rose to national reputation and fame. He was born in Wayne county, Indiana, August 4, 1823, and was not, therefore, so old a man as has been supposed. He should, indeed, be in the full possession of his powers, but like so many American public men, he overtaxed his powers, and his death is the result. He was educated at Miami University studied law and came to the bar in 1847. In 1852 he was elected Circuit Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit of Indiana; and in 1856 he was nominated by the Republicans as their candidate for Governor of Indiana, but was defeated. He thus was the leader of a forlorn hope, in the very organization of the Republican party. This was the year of the Fremont campaign, and it indicated the drift of his career, that he was in the forefront at such a time. In 1860 he was elected Lieutenant Governor, and in 1861 succeeded to the office of Governor, on the transfer of Governor H. S. Lane to the United States Senate.

His career as Governor. He was then Governor of the State at the outbreak of the civil war, and was the right man in the right place. The Legislature was Democratic and refused the means to raise troops to go to the front. The Knights of the Golden Circle formed their organization in the State, and it was generally conceded that the leading influences of the State were against him. On the adjournment of the Legislature, however, he set himself determinedly to work, raised money on his personal assurance of its repayment, went to Washington, secured aid from the General Government, equipped troops, and sent his full State quota to the field. His labors at this time were enormous. Not only did he thus raise money for the troops and for the purposes of his Government, but he kept the Knights of the Golden Circle and disloyal Democrats in check, and even went to distant States as a political campaign speaker. It is impossible to do justice to this period of his career. He was consumed with a burning eagerness to defeat and overthrow rebellion. When Pittsburgh was threatened, toward the close of the war, by a rebel raid, he telegraphed General Brooke, in command there, that he could, if needed, send him a regiment at an hour's notice, and another regiment at a day's notice. And thus he toiled through the war. And at the first legislative session that occurred he secured a Republican majority that ratified his loans and legalized his debts. More than any other man during the war he moulded and carried his State. In 1864 he was elected Governor for a second term, and in 1865 he had a stroke of paralysis which necessitated suspension of labor and rest.

arranging the loans of his State held abroad. In 1866 he returned and resumed Executive duties. It was in June, 1866, that he delivered the celebrated political speech, sitting in a chair. Of this speech over a million million copies were circulated. This resulted in his being elected to the United States Senate by a vote that was extremely complimentary. Thus began his Senatorial career.

IN THE SENATE. In the United States Senate he at once assumed a commanding position, serving on the Committees of Foreign Relations, Agriculture, Military Affairs, and Private Land Claims. On all the great issues that came before that body he took decided positions, mixing freely in the debates, and soon commanding respect as one of the great leaders of the Senate. In 1870 he was tendered the mission to England, but declined it. In 1873 he was re-elected to the Senate, and still continued active in his duties. He was known as a strong supporter of President Grant, a thorough Republican. His latest labors as Senator were in connection with the Electoral Commission, in the investigation of the Chinese question in San Francisco, and in the investigation of the Corbin case in Oregon. His health had been rapidly declining when he went to California. His labors there wearied him. Then came the Oregon trip, during which, in addition to his regular labors, he delivered a long speech at Salem. On his return he was stricken with the disease that resulted in his death.

Now that the struggle is over, one can measure with some accuracy the immense vital energy of the man, who for many years held death at arm's length, and bore with unflinching fortitude pain, labor, mental anxiety and physical decay enough to have killed half a dozen lesser men.

In Morton the brain was the last thing to die. The malady which first manifested itself in his lower limbs slowly crept up, paralyzing him by inches. The attack which finally stretched him on the bed of death was a paralysis of the upper limbs; next the vital functions were paralyzed, and the end seemed not far off. But death yet seemed loth to still the workings of the magnificent brain, whose thoughts have been interwoven with the greatest period of our history, and whose unquenchable courage and iron will looked defiance at him to the last.

He was cut off in his prime. Over-work had much to do with the breakdown of his system. His was a wonderful life, and his death occurred just when his country could least spare him.

AN ORDINANCE

PROHIBITING THE TRANSPORTATION OF NITRO-GLYCERINE AND DANGEROUS COMPOUNDS THROUGH THE BOROUGH.

Passed Oct. 13, 1877.

Be it ordained by the Burgess and Council of the Borough of Tionesta, and it is hereby ordained by authority of the same:

Sec. 1. That if any person shall knowingly have or transport through the street of said Borough any explosive and dangerous material known as Nitro-Glycerine, Dynamite, Gun Cotton and Phosphoric compounds of the same by any name called in any package called a torpedo or other vessel containing said compounds, for every such offense the person so carrying or transporting shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on proof of a violation of this ordinance shall be fined not less than fifty, nor more than two hundred dollars, by the Burgess or any Justice of the Peace of said Borough. Said fine to go into the general Borough fund except as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 2. That in every case of the violation of this ordinance, without regard to the owner of the explosive material it shall be lawful for the Borough Constable or the High Constable, either on warrant (based upon a complaint) issued by the Burgess or any Justice of the Peace to seize said explosives, the team and vehicle in which it is carried, and arrest the party carrying the same, and upon complaint being lodged, on oath of any citizen of the said Borough, the Burgess or Justice (as the case may be) may issue his warrant to any sheriff, constable, or any other person, commanding him to seize the same, and arrest the person carrying the explosive materials, wheresoever the same may be found in said Borough, and also to take possession of the material and convey it to some safe place. If the fine imposed as aforesaid is not paid within 24 hours, it shall then be lawful to sell the material seized, as well as the vehicle and horses, in and by which the dangerous compound is transported, giving reasonable notice by advertisements of the sale. One-fourth of the fine received to be paid to the officer making the arrest and seizing the property.

Sec. 3. It is further declared the lawful duty of any constable or other officer of said Borough to arrest on his own view any offender against this ordinance without warrant, anything in this ordinance hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

Passed and Approved Oct. 13, 1877. G. W. ROBINSON, Burgess. Attest: SAMUEL D. IRWIN, Clerk. 31

More and Fresher News, and More Reading Matter than any other Daily Paper in North-Western Pennsylvania!

THE OIL CITY DAILY DERRICK will begin the new year with a larger circulation than ever attained by any daily newspaper in Pennsylvania outside of the large cities. It has gained this by giving all the freshest news, and sparing no pains in obtaining it. It has correspondents in every portion of the Oil Region, besides several reporters who are constantly traveling. The proprietors, editors and reporterial staff, are all young and energetic men, whose aim is to make the Derrick the leading newspaper of Western Pennsylvania.

The Derrick will be better than ever for 1877. It will have special reporters at Washington and Harrisburg, who will send daily specials of all important events. Its readers will be kept posted on all the political news of the day, as reported from an independent standpoint, while a large reporterial force will keep them informed on local matters. It will also, as it does now, take the lead in discussing questions of importance to oilmen, and work faithfully for the interest of the Oil Region. It will maintain its position as authority in oil statistics, and its market quotations will always be found reliable.

If you want spicy reading, fresh news, information concerning the Oil Region, and a red-hot paper, subscribe for the OIL CITY DAILY DERRICK. Terms, $10 per year; six months $5; $1 a month in advance. W. H. LONGWELL & CO., Publishers, Oil City, Pa. 39-31
