Stubbing his Sweetheart to Death-Then Hurrying to his own Home and Shooting

Himself through the Head. A recent telegraphic dispatch from Catasauqua, Pa., says: For some months past it has been an understood thing in the little hamlet of Fernadale, threequarters of a mile from here, that John Haddock and Lizzie Davis kept company together. John worked in the rolling mill and got wages enough to support a wife. Lizzie kept house for her uncle and had a reputation as a cook. But Mrs. Haddock, John's mother, for some reason did not like her. Miss Davis at length determined to break off with John and rather encouraged the attentions of another lover, Israel Jones. John told her on Sunday that if she would not have him he would kill her and then himself, and she answered that he might do as he pleased about the last. She told her uncle, however, that she did not intend to jilt him, and seemed to consider his threats as jocose. Last night the Davis' had company to tea and Haddock came in later. The party were playing the game of authors and the new arrival was asked to join, but he refused. The game ended, the company broke up. Mr. Davis going home with a lady visitor A disastrous wind and snow storm off Cape Cod caused many wrecks and a large loss of learn the cry of murder proceeding from heard the cry of murder proceeding from heard the cry of murder proceeding from heard the cry of murder proceeding from Haddock's house, Remembering Haddock's threats, which Lizzie had repeated to him, he hurried to his own house, forboding something wrong. The front door would not open, and a neighbor helped him to push it open. Entering they discovered that it was the body of Lizzie Davis, in which life was barely lingering, that had barred the door. Traces showing how the poor girl had fought for life were plentiful. Handsful of her beautiful hair were scattered on the floor, which was streaked with blood, and there was a great pool of blood where she had been lying. Her torn garments were clotted with blood, which was still welling from a wound in the breast. Her face, neck and hands were slashed with a knife, as though the murderer had first attempted to cut his victim's throat. The girl was not dead before the shout of murder which had aroused the village was accounted for. After killing his be-trothed, Haddock had gone to his father's honse, 300 yards distant, mounted to the second story, and shot himself at the head of the stairs. He had placed the pistol close to his body, and was a dead man when his mother, seeing what was done, raised the cry which disclosed the louble tragedy. The wound made by the passage of the bullet was as large as s trade dollar. A paper collar was found near the body on which the murderer done was an old fashioned revolver of the pepper box pattern, carrying in its five chambers a tremendous bullet. Haddock had borrowed it of Patrick Reilly, a fellow workman at the rolling mills, an hour before his bloody crime was committed, on pretence of shooting a dog which annoyed him on his return from

At the coroner's inquest Reilly testi-fied that Haddock, on receiving the weapon, which had four chambers loaded danced for joy. On hearing the pistol shots Reilly suspected the cause, and hurrying to Haddock's house, identified his property as it lay beside the bleeding body of the dead borrower. Reilly, who was an intimate friend of Haddock, said that the latter had never confided to him that there was any difficulty between himself and his betrothed, which he ordinarily would be likely to do. Haddock was not known to drink, and his mother says he was the most obedient of her eight children. He had not eaten heartily for the past week, but had not even intimated that anything was wrong with him. He was twenty-one years of age, Miss Davis was nineteen. She was a brunette, and must have been of unusually attractive appearance. The bullet fired by Haddock penetrated the heart. The knife with which he assailed her is of the kind used by butchers, and has a blade eight inches long.

Treatment of Spavin in Horses.
Entrop of Onio Farmen:—The inquiry

often made in our agricultural and family journals concerning a remedy for spavin.

Dr. B. J. Kendall, of Enceburgh Falls, Vt., some time since, in treating a horse for spavin in the usual manner by blistering, finding that the application produced so much soreness and pain and apparently no good, determined to investigate the matter in order to find a remedy, if possible, that would produce the desired effect in a more rational and humane manner. This result he finally succeeded in accomplishing, and the "Kendall's Spavin Cure," as called, is proving all that could reasonably have been expected of it. I have in-terested myself particularly in the matter in order to get at the facts, and find that the remedy will effectually remove spavin and plint in from five to six weeks time, causing no blistering or soreness and leaving no callous or sear to indicate where the difficulty existed. This is truly an important discovery in medi-cal science, and the case with which it can be applied and the absence of suffering to the animal treated will commend the remedy the attention of all. E. R. Towne. west Berkshire, Vt.

We are informed that the "Kendall's Spavin can now be had throughout the country at the stores. Circulars will be sent to all send-ing their address, which give testimonials of its beneficial effects on horses, by removing the enlargements of all kinds, without blistering, and also working to perfection on man.

Death in His Favorite, Robe. The mortuary statistics of the whole civilized world show that about one-fifth of all mankind die of consumption alone, and the number of deaths due to consumption bears a greater ratio to the whole number than that of any other three diseases together. Moreover, investigation proves that this ratio is steadily increasing. Its increasing prevalance has led to the popular belief that consumption is incur-Every year hundreds of these sufferers seek, in the sumny retreats of Florida or the dry atmosphere of Colorado, for health—and find only a grave. The influence of the atmosphere—the only remodial agent that either Florida or Colorado can afford the consumptive—is at best only palliative. The cure of consumption depends upon two essential conditions: 1st, the arrest of the abnormal breaking down of the tissues, which prevents emanciation and 2nd, the restoration of healthy nutrition, in order to stop the formation of tuberculous mat-ter. Fulfill these conditions, and consumption is as curable as fever. To fulfill these conditions the required remedy must increase the appetite, favor the assimilation of food, and enrich the blood, thus retarding the develop-ment of tubercles. To accomplish this, a more powerful alterative than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has never been discovered. At the same time it soothes the irritation of the nervous system produced by violent coughing, which in its turn so often leads to more serious results. The use of "expectorants" in consumption is absolutely suic'dal. For while removing the tubercles already formed, they produce yet more serious results by inflam ing and destroying the sound and healthy tis sues. Consumption requires a remedy that will soothe while it relieves; harsh medicines, but add fuel to the flame that already threate consume the system. The Golden Medical Discovery fuffills these conditions, and has been pronounced the best remedy yet discovered to allay and arrest consumption.

Regular Secretion Essential to Health.
The regular secretion and flow of the gastric juices, and of the bile which the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters promotes, are effects which conduce materially to the restoration which conduce materially to the restoration of health, when the system is disordered.
