

A TRIBUTE OF MEMORY.

Death of Col. P. D. Thomas.

BRIEF SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

[From the "Forest Press," 9th inst.] On the morning of February 7th, about eight o'clock, Col. Philip D. Thomas passed away.

Philip Dunn Thomas was born near Meadville, in the county of Crawford, in August, 1807. When two years old, or thereabouts, his parents moved to Chester Co., Pa., where he spent his boyhood and resided in the historic Chester Valley, the home of the Waynes and the scenes of the early struggles of our fathers for freedom.

He settled at Paoli, building a dwelling there, and remained there for several years. In 1846 he was elected by the people of Chester a Representative in the 56th Legislature of Pa., which office he filled with great satisfaction to the people.

For several years subsequent he was engaged in railroading, and was instrumental in having new roads projected and built in the eastern part of the State. After this he removed to Philadelphia, and took charge as Collector at Fairmount, which position he held for many years, and filled with credit to himself and profit to the Schuylkill Navigation Co., who owned the works.

For a period of his life he was engaged in a large saw mill at Old Chester, as it is called, on the Delaware, in company with William Frick. The lumber manufactured was for the building of vessels and ships. We mention these circumstances, as we know the interest which all the good men of Forest have in the life of one they loved so well. While in company with Frick near the mouth of the Delaware he invented a monitor of which he built a small model, designing to patent it, but the fruits of his labor were stolen by some crafty person and the same patented by another individual, and Mr. Thomas was deprived of his invention. He often lamented this, as he often said he afterwards, during the war, saw monitors built after his Chester model.

The oil excitement of Northwestern Pennsylvania brought our excellent and never to be forgotten friend here. The spring of 1864 found him the agent and manager of a large oil Co., called "The Mercantile Oil Co." at East Hickory. The men who constituted this Co. were among the first men of Philadelphia. They had lands on Oil Creek and in the vicinity of East Hickory, and our dear departed friend was their general agent, having the oversight and management of all their property, but put the most of his energies to developing at East Hickory, as he seemed to like the country, where he put down wells both for the Mercantile and National Oil Companies, which he represented. Here he formed acquaintances with the people that ripened into firm friendship.

In 1865 he married Miss Helen S. May, of Tionesta, when he settled here. From the first he seemed to take a deep interest, not only in his own neighborhood, but in the whole country. Road commissioners, path masters and others always got his free and valuable advice, as the roads in many sections are a standing memorial to this day. Since which time it will never be recorded the good he has done, or all the improvements which he has made, either by himself or through his counsel and advice to others. Time will never tell his valuable suggestions, or the benefit he has been to others.

He was just the man to reorganize a county, assist in its arrangements, and set the machinery of public affairs in order. He had a brain sufficiently comprehensive in what was especially fitted to do good, and his appointment as County Commissioner in 1867 soon led to the erection of beautiful public buildings which now adorn the public grounds. Time fails to follow this branch of the theme further, as all know his ability and honest energy. He continued farming, also making improvements in one way and another until 1876, when he was elected State Senator of this district. On none more nobly could the office have been conducted. He filled it with credit to himself and in the best interests of his constituency.

But little more of his personal history can we write within the narrow limits of this weak tribute to his memory. Upon his return he commenced building a house, and finished the first brick dwelling house that has been erected in the county, a local monument to his memory. This is saying something. The economist says that "he who makes a blade of grass to grow where not one grew before is a philanthropist." Reader, has our friend done this? Your responsive heart furnishes its own answer.

Disease seemed to fasten on his strong frame with an unrelenting grip about the middle of last summer. Yet amidst his severe trials he was the same. Constant pleasantries was mingled with the genuine effusion of good nature and good humor, tempered with delicacy and modesty without a tincture of ill will.

On the 17th of Oct. last he was carried on his bed to the railroad station, followed by a train of sympathizing friends. Ah, we well remember it. His adieus to the people who gathered around his couch, and with tears in their eyes bade him good bye, is one of the most affecting scenes we have ever witnessed. But his happy face shone with sunshine on his sympathizing friends. Socrates parting with his friends could not have formed a more eloquent scene. The cars came and he was taken off in a trice, and we never saw our friend again.

He has passed away; but his happy memory and his good example remain.
