Peter McHugh, Patrick Hester and Patrick Tully were banged at Bloomsburg, Pa., for the murder of a mining superintendent named Rea, in 1868. The town was filled with people from the surrounding country, but only about two hundred persons were admitted to the jail yard where the execution took place. The three men were hanged together, and exhibited little signs of fear. Hester, who was in sub-stantial circumstances and for whom strenu-ous efforts had been made to obtain an amel-ioration of the death sentence, protested his innocence to the last. While the men were still hanging a shed on the side of the jail yard cave way with a great protestic this gave way with a crash, precipitating about fifty persons to the ground and injuring a little boy so severely that he died soon after.

The recent report of Acting Superintendent lenry L. Lamb on the condition of the savings banks in the State of New York shows that nine savings banks were closed during 1877the Long sland, of Brooklyn; Clairmon, Clinton. German, Oriental and Yorkville, of New York; Rock and of Nyack, Saratoga, of Saratoga Springs, and the New Rochelle, with a total amount due depositors of $1,601,719.34. In the State, to-day, 186 savings banks are doi g business. The total deposits and the number of depositors have decreased during the year. The deposits fell off nearly $6,000,000; the transactions of the year were smaller in the transactions of the year were smaller in their volume than in other recent years : more their volume than in other recent years: more accounts were opened than were closed; the average of each deposit declined, and the surplus of the institutions has shrunk. The total resources of the banks, now in operation, was on January I. 1878, $56,786,336; total Habilities, $51,455,238, leaving a surplus of $5,331,098. From these facts the superintendent finds reason for the belief that the savings banks are coming back to sound rules in administration, are commanding reasonable confidence of depositors, and are sound.

Mrs. George Wallace, her infant child and Miss Church, a schoolgirl, were murdered near Wheeling, W. Va., by the former's brother-inlaw, John Wallace. After the murder he accused his brother of the crime and both were arrested. Eventually John confessed to having killed the three alone, alleging as a motive that Mrs. Wallace and her husband had been talking about him and his wife. His reason for killing Miss Church was that he was afraid his would find out what he had done. He sarted with Mrs. Wallace and her child for the bouse of Miss Church and on the way killed bouse of Miss Church and on the way killed them with a hammer. Then he proceeded to Miss Church's and completed his terrible work. The Statue for New York Harbor.

A French paper says: The colossa statue of "Liberty Lighting the World," erected by France and America in remembrance of their old friend ship, is coming out little by little from the immense workshops established expressly for its construction in the Rue de Chazelles, No. 25, near Monceaux Park. The arm and hand holding the torch are already in America, and at present the sculptor, Bartholdi is finishing the principal portion of the head. The plaster model is nearly completed. In a few days it will be strip-ped of the scaffolding which surrounds it and upon which several gangs of men are at work. The first sentiment in spired by the enormous head, nearly thirty feet high, is almost terror. Its gigantic dimensions are stupefying; but by degrees the eye becomes accustomed to the colossal forms, and the mind reconciles itself to the extent of those nincteen hours, the tournament closing sconer than the time fixed on account of the great crowd present. The originator of the contest was Sir John Astley, a member of Parliament, who guaranteed prizes amounting to $3,750. Two tracks were laid—one for Englishmen and the other for foreigners—and Weston, the American pedestrian was expected to compete, but became sick a few days before the contest began. Seventeen contestants started, but the race gradually narrowed down to O'Leary, Yaughan and Brown, the first Universal Exposition. Nevertheless. we strongly advise every one before-hand to visit the establishment on the Rue de Chazelles and see how the different portions of this head are prepared, worked and adjusted. M. Bartholdi is making copies in plaster of his statue of Liberty. Two hundred of them only will be executed, numbered and registered with the name of the purchaser, who may in this may preserve a souvehir of this magnificent commemorative of the centennial anniversary of the independence of the United States, and destined to renew and enliven the old friendship between France and America.

People who still adhere to the look-at-yourtengue-and-feel-of-your-pulse doctor some-times express not a little curiosity in regard to Dr. R. V. Pierce's original method of distinguishing all forms of chronic disease without personal consultation. Some even suppose guishing all forms of chronic disease without personal consultation. Some even suppose that he accomplishes this through clairvoyance or some other species of professional jugglery. All this is utterly false. He claims to determine disease by the rational methods of science only. Says Comley, in his Blographical Encyclopedia of New York State, speaking of this distinguished physician: "He perceived that in each of the natural sciences the investigator proceeds according to a system of tigator proceeds according to a system of signs. The geologist in his cabinet accurately determines and describes the cleft of rock, which he has never seen, from the minute specimen on his table. And the chemist in his laboratory notes the constituents of the sun with the same precision that he analyzes a crystal of rock sait. The analogous system de-veloped by Dr. Pierce in Medical relence is worthy of his genius, and has made his rame justly celebrated."
